One weakness of my primary source, the article on Welsh Independence, is that it is broad. The reason that this is a weakness is because it does not go into detail about the specifics of Welsh Independence in today's world, and that is what the main topic of my argument is. The article discusses the history of Welsh independence and how far it has come the past hundred years, but this is not of much use to me and is prolonging my reading time trying to find the relevant information. Another weakness with this primary source is that there is not much of a counter argument, only stating the discussion around the subject and the basics of it. This is an issue as in my essay and presentation I will be needing to see the other side of the debate around Welsh independence, otherwise I will have no argument and will not be meeting the criteria for the assignment. This then leads to the need to find another source to this information and how that could be time consuming and be difficult to gather information in a timely manner. Lastly, another issue is that although the article mentions the discussion around Welsh independence it does not have any supporting evidence around Welsh independence itself, again adding to the time-consuming act that is finding the evidence needed to support my argument.

Politics.co.uk. (n.d.). Welsh Independence - All you need to know. [online] Available at: https://www.politics.co.uk/reference/welsh-independence/.