psychtests
Test Yourself

Home | Businesses & Professionals

MEMBERS

email (or username)

password

SIGN IN

register forgot password

ADVERTISEMENT

ADVERTISEMENT

Post Share

Career Motivation Test

SUMMARY | INTRO | GRAPHS | DETAILS | CAREER MOTIVATORS

Snapshot Report

Financial Reward

70

0 100

People motivated by Financial Reward strive for the big pay-off that comes as the fruit of their labor. They want to feel that their salary and benefits equal the value of the time and energy they invest in their work. While this is a common motivator that most people identify with (who wants to work for peanuts?), these individuals place more importance on remuneration than the average worker. This is not to say they are only after the big bucks; it's having the money to afford a certain lifestyle that gives them the drive to succeed. They are willing to invest themselves, but will not do so without significant pay-off. They don't necessarily have to make an extremely high salary in the short-term to feel happy, especially when starting out, but they want to see the long-term reward for the personal investment they put into their career.

Want to learn more?

Want to learn more about what's important to you in a job? Most of us are driven to work hard by a variety of factors. For example, you scored 55 on the Balanced Lifestyle motivator. Find out right now what this means and more about your other motivators by ordering the full test report.

Buy your personalized report

view sample report

Professional users, such as HR managers, coaches, and therapists, can request a free demo for this or other assessments from PsychTests' extensive battery in the ARCH Profile testing platform. http://www.archprofile.com/.

ARCH PROFILE

ADVERTISEMENT

ADVERTISEMENT

privacy policy terms of use contact

© 2024 PsychTests AIM Inc. All Rights Reserved