The Second Triumvirate

The Second Triumvirate was created by was Octavian, Mark Antony and Marcus Lepidus to avenge Julius Caesars death by killing his assassins, which happened in Macedonia where they seized victory twice against Brutus and Cassius which caused the suicide of the two assassins.

Becoming Emperor of Rome.

After the Civil War Octavian was now able to become emperor but if he didn't want to end up like his great uncle he would have to take the process slowly. The first thing that Octavian did was return the power that he gained back to the Senate but this didn't matter as he still had the respect of soldiers and veterans and he also had a significant influence over the senate because of his financial power. The first mention of Octavian becoming Augustus was on the 16th January 27 BC and was granted the right to have the Corona Civica or Civic Crown over his door.

The Final War of the Roman Republic.

Octavian was once again granted the title of Consul allowing him to declare war on his rival Mark Antony one of the few people that could prevent him from becoming Emperor of Rome. Octavian would go to war with Antony and his wife Cleopatra which would result in their loss and eventually suicide.
