

Did the space feel familiar or unfamiliar? Why?

I feel unfamiliar because I don't see any familiar people or objects around me. It is very quiet.

How did you perceive time in the space?

I feel the lights in the room flickering, indicating that time is passing.

How did the space make you feel, can you pinpoint something specific that made you feel that way?

The space makes me feel both curiosity and fear. I think it's because the room's lights suddenly went out, and darkness leaves me feeling lost.

At any point did you see a figure or though you saw a figure momentarily?

It seems that I saw a shadowy figure flicker past at the end of the room.

Did you imagine anything/anyone in the space with you?

I imagine that in the space just beyond the wall of my room, there is a sofa and a television. Two or three people are sitting inside, watching a black-and-white movie. Meanwhile, some others in the room are watching surveillance footage, closely observing my movements.

Did the experience link to a memory? If so, what memory?

It is probably related to my memories, specifically a escape room game I once played. I was trapped in a vast, empty room, searching for hidden mechanisms, while people outside were monitoring every move inside.
