- What is it?

Professional training is a major tool available to all working people: employees, the self-employed, business leaders or job seekers. It allows you to train throughout your professional career, to develop your skills and access to employment, to stay in employment or to change jobs. It is an obligation since 3rd, December 1966 in France with the law “of orientation and program on the professional training”.

- The goals:

- Adapt staff to their current position;
- Adapt new entrants,
- Develop the professionalism of employees;
- Prepare staff for future developments;
- Prepare for conversions
- Share knowledge and know-how;
- Raise the general level of staff

The "Delors" law of July 16, 1971 on the terms "organization of continuing vocational training in the context of continuing education". This law leads to the principle of private funding for vocational training, hence the creation of a training market, and excludes independent training professions.
