

<https://youtu.be/PRGv4h6v18w>

Me myself and I

For this work I videoed my shoots and locations of where I went and used images from the shoots into the video that I made. I used Lightroom to edit the videos and pictures that are featured in the video, I wanted the videos to match the images that I created. I wanted the colours to match each shoot as each shoot has a different meaning, which I wanted to be shown. Barbara Kruger is the artist I have taken so much inspiration from as an artist, I used quotes that have helped me over the years in my video all which I got from an article AZquotes.com. I created my video in iMovie, using the most basic style as I am unsure and never actual made a video before I wanted to keep it as simple as possible. I then took the video to Inshot to add the writing to the video, I wrote out what I wanted to say and transferred it to the video. I decided against music because I did not want to be copyrighted and I did not like any songs that the apps had to offer didn't really suit what I was looking for, I learned how to play the piano growing up but unfortunately, I do not own a piano anymore. The cover of the video is a screen recording of me writing over a shadow picture of me that I had edited in Lightroom. The reason that it is a shadow is because I find it difficult knowing who I am as a person and I felt it fit the theme of what I wanted for the video. I wanted the video to end on a rhetorical question as I felt it was a "to be continued" type of video because I feel like I am constantly changing as a person and growing so much that I had no definite answer to the question and maybe in 3 years I might have the answer but as of right now I do not and I wanted the ending to feel like that.