

Preparation for Armies and Navies

Block Structure:

1. Each block is worth 20 credits
2. 20 credits equals 200 hours of study
3. Each block is 5 weeks long, including prep week

It may help you to think of these 200 hours like a job. For example, if you work 8 hours a day for 5 days a week over the 5 weeks, you will have studied for 200 hours. This total includes all work associated with this module (e.g. assignments, lectures, preparation for lectures, extra reading, meetings with me, etc.).

Reading for Preparation Week

Please read and take notes on the following works. Only the first work is available digitally, while the other two are only available as physical copies in the library. I shall upload PDFs of the relevant chapters as soon as possible, so please do not take these copies out of the library for the time being.

1. Sage, M.M., 1996. Warfare in Ancient Greece: A Sourcebook. London - New York: Routledge.
2. Van Wees, H., Whitbey, M., Sabin, P.A.G. 2007, The Cambridge History of Greek and Roman Warfare (Vol. 1). Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
3. Van Wees, H. 2004, Greek Warfare: Myths and Realities. London: Duckworth.

Office Hour

I shall be holding my first office hour during prep week on Friday 17th February between 11-12pm. Please come and see me in my office (A113, upstairs in Arts Building) or call me on Teams. If you cannot make this time due to other commitments, please email me to arrange another time. I am aware that some of you may not have studied ancient history academically before; if not, I would strongly recommend having a chat with me before we start teaching.
