

Module number BMSW4001

ACE Term 1 G10

Assignment Part 1

Rilka Stoyanova 2020975

Lecturer Timothy Hopkins

The presentation includes sources that shows the steps I need to follow in my desired career as a Business Manager

What qualifications do you need to be a business manager

You'll usually need 5 GCSEs, including English and math's. With experience, you could apply for promotion to office manager or business manager. Depending upon your level of dedication, a business administration major can take the following time to complete: Associate's degree programs, which provide entry-level opportunity, usually take two years or A bachelor's degree program takes four years. Master's degree programs and MBAs generally require one to two years. These are usually 3-year courses covering topics such as management theory and practice, budgeting and planning, leadership skills and organizational behavior. To get into this job, you'll need a good standard of education, including math's, English and IT. Some employers may ask for a degree. Experience of sales or marketing is usually required. It may also be possible to start in a junior role and work your way up.

How to Become a Business Manager

Most business manager positions will require you to have at least a bachelor's degree in business administration or related field and years of experience. Understanding the intricacies of a company's operations is the key to success. Preparation for this career path includes work in a specialty or related industry. Some positions require advanced degrees or certifications. The job involves other skills like decision-making, problem-solving, and leadership. Some employers provide training and development programs. Excellent communication and analytical skills are imperative for managing business plans, clients, and employees. A global perspective of your field is a plus.

- How to Be a Good Business Manager - According to the Gallup Poll's State of the American Workplace report, today's employees want a clear set of direction both for themselves and the organization. They also seek motivation from their supervisors. A good business manager provides the necessary tools and preparation so that employees can use their talents. They will communicate effectively and clearly with their staff. They create work environments conducive to collaboration. They respect their employees' need for an adequate work-life balance. Careful and detailed onboarding and regular stay interviews are common in successful businesses.

What does a business development manager do

What does a business development manager do?

This role involves finding new customers and persuading existing ones to buy extra services. If you're interested in sales and building relationships, this job could be ideal for you.

Business development managers work in a variety of businesses across the public and private sectors, or for charities. For example, in manufacturing you might work to secure new production contracts, whereas in education you may look to forge closer links between colleges and employers to provide more places for apprentices. Duties can vary depending on your role, but are likely to involve:

If you work for a charity, you'll be responsible for securing statutory funding and increasing the number and amount of donations. You'll also improve awareness of your charity and widen its influence.

References-

1. What qualifications do you need to be a business manager -

<https://www.google.bg/search?q=what+qualifications+do+you+need>

2. How to Become a Business Manager-<https://www.google.bg/search?q=how+to+become+a+business+manager&biw=>

3. How to Be a Good Business Manager-<https://www.google.bg/search?q=how+to+be+a+good+business+manager>

4. What does a business development manager do-

<https://www.google.bg/search?q=What+does+a+business+development+manager+do>