Save Outdoor Education

UK Outdoors welcomes Government's roadmap to restarting Outdoor Education at Easter 2021

Press Release - 30 November 2020

Additional Theories to consider in your arguments as to the value of OA

- Do some research on each of these theories and consider if they support or challenge your opinion on the value of OA
- Are they applicable in an OA setting (Reflection and Active Experimentation) and if so are they transferable to everyday life (Abstract conceptualisation and Practical Application)

Individual Behaviour Change.... What drives us?

- Dr William Glasser, published in 1960's (Choice Theory)

Glasser argues that we have total agency in the entirety of our 'total behaviour', leading to a more responsible, empowered, co-dependency and blame free, life.

Positive Go-Kart!

Carol Dweck (American Psychologist) 1990's

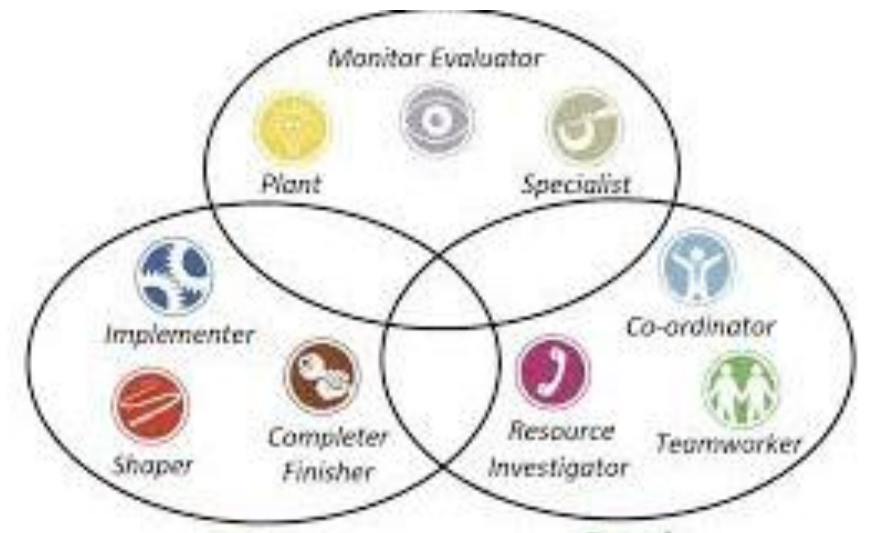

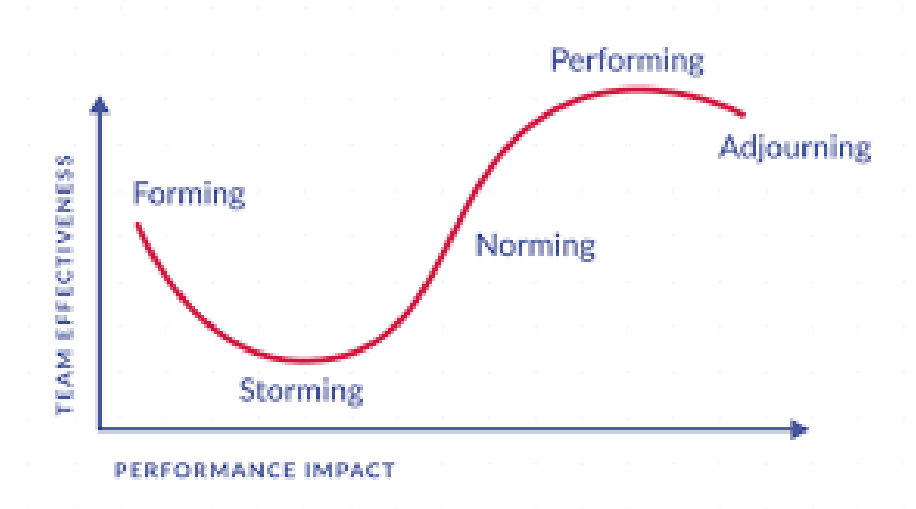

Group Development/Team Building

- Bruce Tuckman (Psychology professor) 1965
- Raymond Belbin (Management consultant) 1988

Do we have enough time with our groups to go through this process in current OAE delivery models... or do we have more?

Local long term provision in/through schools

Assessment 1

- What are your key arguments for adventure programmes What?
- Do they address the challenges we face in post-modern times (Education, Health, Environment) or make them worse. How? So What?
- Do they do this as well as/better than/less effectively than less adventure based provision such as school education, scouts/guides, family activities.
- How do we know these programmes work, do they all work? – Evidence
- What are the downfalls or challenges to this kind of provision (Quality, accessibility, cost)
- What does all this mean for the future of OAE? Now What
