BDP Workshop 3

- How have you been working on your BDP project?

I've been spending time reading journal articles and gathering information related to my topic. I also started writing different sections of my report and organizing my ideas. Whenever I get stuck, I make notes and discuss them with my supervisor.

- What worked? What did not? Why?

What worked well was finding useful research papers because they gave me a better understanding of my topic. I also found that making a weekly plan helped me stay on track. One thing that didn't work was trying to finish too much in one day. Sometimes I underestimated how long tasks would take, so I had to adjust my schedule.

- What have you learned from your meeting with your supervisor?

During my meeting, my supervisor helped me decide on the country for my BDP project. I had initially planned to focus on the India for my multi brand cloud kitchen project, but he suggested that I choose UK instead. He explained that focusing on the UK would make project more relevant to the course and provide better access to reliable data and market information. This advice helped me understand the importance of choosing a market that supports strong research and analysis.
