

PowerPoint presentation about my intended career by Kayne Johnson

My future job and plans.

- My plans once leaving the course is to become a flight attendant. I have always had an interest in travelling and working with people in a hands on situation.
- I have researched into this for quite some time and will be including some information from a few different websites.
- I will also be speaking about the skills and qualifications I have now and will need to be able to get into this field of work.

Academic skills/qualifications I currently have.

I currently have a selection of academic qualifications, I also have some none academic.

I have- functional skills level 1 maths

functional skills level 1 English

functional skills level 2 maths

functional skills level 2 English

GCSE maths D

I also have a BHS level 1&2 to work with horses and my food hygiene level 1&2

Employability skills I currently have

- Previously I have worked in a few different areas, mainly hospitality.
- The jobs I have had are;
- Waitressing in 3 different restaurants, during these jobs I had earned people skills, money handling skills, time keeping and more.
- Another job I had was online marketing selling perfumes, I defiantly learned a lot more social media-based skills and furthered on my people skills.
- Lastly working at the stables, whilst working here I earned a lot of animal-based skills as well as time management and sticking to tight schedules.

Experience and qualification I will need.

- The next lot of information has been quoted from <https://www.thebalancecareers.com/how-to-become-a-flight-attendant-525710> written by DAWN ROSENBERG MCKAY
- Employers also prefer job candidates who have work experience in a related job. If you want to become a flight attendant, consider getting experience in customer service by working in a hotel, resort, or restaurant
- You will also need to pass a background check and a pre-employment drug screening. Visible tattoos are typically not allowed unless they can be concealed with makeup

- Once an airline hires you, the company will provide formal training at its flight training center. During the three to six weeks you will spend there, expect to receive classroom instruction on flight regulations, job duties, and company operations.
 - New flight attendants typically spend at least one year on reserve status. Reserve status is essentially being on call
 - Stressful situations call for strong customer service and problem-solving skills. Good listening skills will allow you to understand and meet customers' needs.

Skills I have that will help with my future career plans

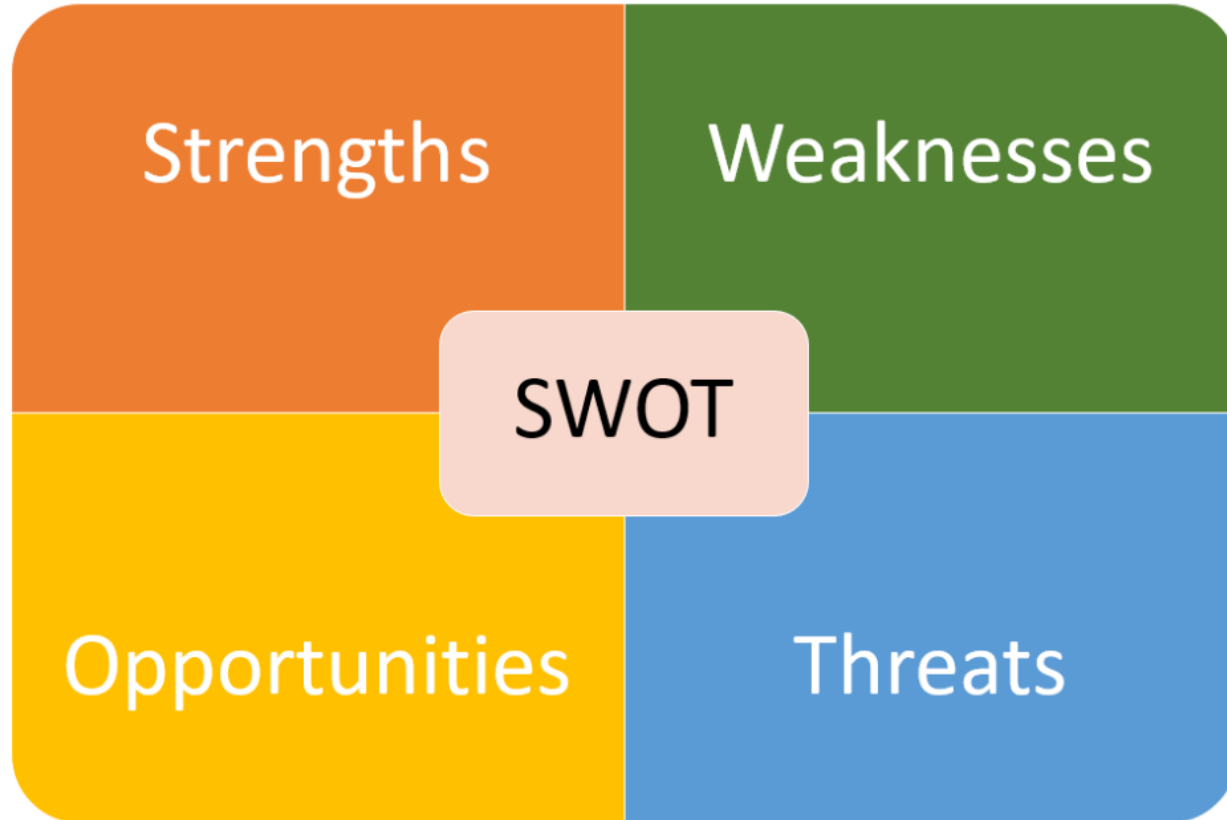

A few of the things I have now that will help me to secure a job as a flight attendant are ;

People skills- most of my previous job roles have been face to face customer roles, this is something I will need for this kind of job.

The ability to work in stressful / difficult situations and resolve them asap.

The rest of the skills or qualifications I will need will mainly require me to go to flight attendant school.
