

Getting back into my craft

Ever since I can remember Dance has always been my favourite part of musical theatre, I found it just came naturally. However, since starting at WAVDA, and beginning my lessons with Keifer, I can happily say that I believe singing is my strongest point.

On my first singing lesson with Keifer, I went in there thinking that I knew all my songs on my repertoire perfectly and that my singing technique was fine, I didn't think my voice would get any better than it was when I started, however as soon as I started singing, Keifer recognised the problem areas in my voice, such as my tongue was in the wrong position and so was my jaw, at first I was sceptical as I've never heard of this before and I have been having singing lessons for a long time, but after some strange vocal exercises such as placing my tongue over my finger and singing one of my songs, I realised it the difference it made making much more room in my mouth and reducing tongue tension.

After only 3 lessons with Keifer adding up to an hour and a half, I've definitely noticed a huge difference with how effortless my singing feels, I've never felt more confident with the way I sound while singing
