

Story About me

My name is Kumari Alannah Strachan. I am 20 years old. I live in Llanelli but was born in a small town outside of Birmingham called Walsall. I have two younger brothers and a younger sister. I am a very family-oriented person and would love to have my own family one day.

I'm not the most interesting person, but I do have a few things I enjoy. These include spending time with my boyfriend and his family, winding my brother up, hanging out with friends, going to the gym, and going on holiday. I also enjoy watching hospital drama shows when I have some time to relax. There are a few good ones on Netflix that I've already completed.

A bit more about me: I attended mainstream education from the age of six months to 11 years old. I was then homeschooled for the duration of secondary school. After that, I attended college for three years and achieved my Health and Social Care NVQ Level 2 and 3.

I believe I am a bright individual, though learning can sometimes be a little complicated for me. I find it difficult to sit still for long periods of time, and it often takes me a bit longer to process what is being said. I struggle to follow verbal instructions and much prefer written ones so I can refer back to them when needed. I also work and focus better when there are fewer people around. I'm currently on the waiting list to be assessed for ASD.

However, I am a very passionate learner and will do everything in my power to learn new things and reach my goals. I love learning about the human body and all the incredible things it's capable of. My biggest ambition is to become a paediatric nurse. I currently work as an agency support worker in children's residential homes and sometimes in schools, which I believe helps me further understand children's minds and their development.

I also have a few other personal goals, including visiting at least 10 different countries in the next five years, as I love travelling. I've already been to Jamaica (where my family is from), Canada, Egypt, Turkey, and recently to two Greek islands Corfu and Kos. I'm a sucker for beach destinations and would love to explore more of the world. One day, I would also love to take part in a missionary trip to help people in need who may not have access to the kind of support we're fortunate to have here.

Lastly, I want to make you aware that I manage ongoing depression and anxiety, for which I'm prescribed medication. However, I sometimes take the medication intermittently to avoid long term dependence. This can occasionally affect my attendance or energy levels. I am blessed with a good support system. My mother and my boyfriend are both very understanding and supportive and helpful in my times of need. Despite this, I'm committed to staying on top of my coursework and doing my best. I appreciate your understanding and support.
