The kind of teacher I aspire to be

A teacher who is committed to ensuring that students can achieve their full educational potential.

I aspire to build caring, respectful, trusting, and approachable relationships with students.

I want my students to demonstrate positive values and behaviour in society and their lives.

Reasons for entering the teaching profession

My interest in teaching peaked during 2018. My career in financial services has given me significant experience in a variety of roles. I found myself being able to teach others effectively and confidently. After careful consideration my desire pushed me towards teaching.

My love for business started at a very young age in the family business.

I intend to mirror the values of my Business Studies teacher from Secondary School. His insight and dedication instilled a desire for me to pursue Business at Undergraduate level and now into my career.
