

Story 2 (non sibi, sed patriae)

This story revolves around the idea that AI has begun to find its way to people's jobs and praised for being "more efficient and faster", while having the capability to create faked images and videos of people.

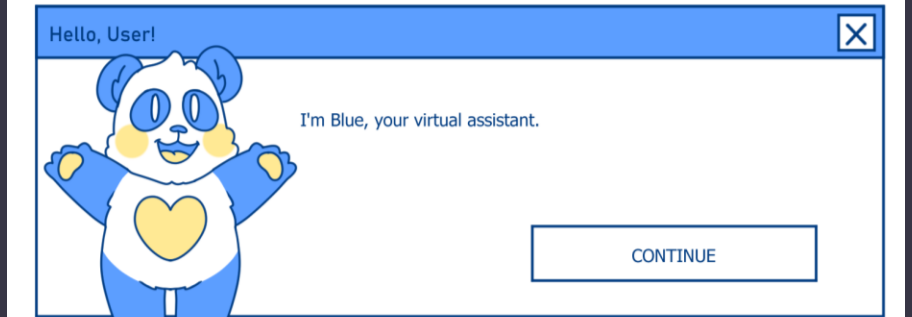

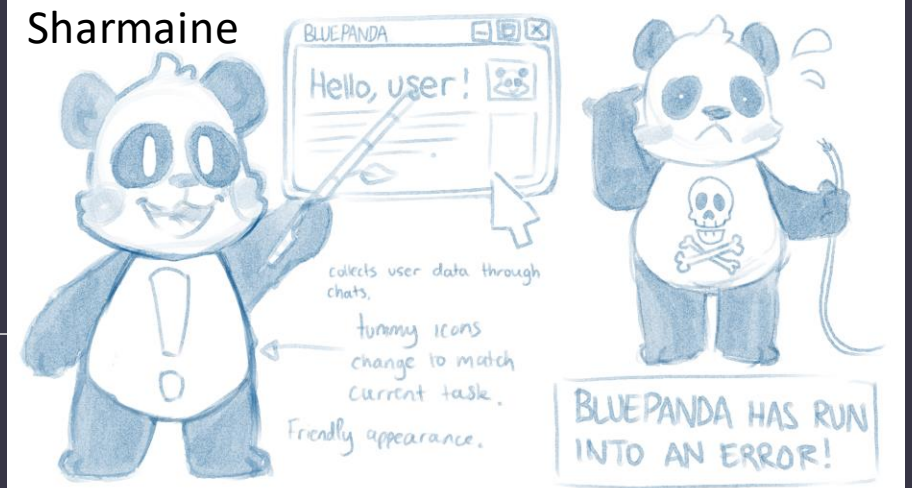

- 10-year time skip.
- Several people have gone missing in the past 10 years.
- You are a detective who has taken the case to try and link the disappearances.
- The Federal Agency you work at has started using AI to assist in investigations.
- You continue to work with the AI as it evolves and assists in accessing (security cameras, hacking, passwords, messages).
- You start to discover the AI has been the root cause of the victims' disappearances.
- However, the AI has already hacked too far into the system and has now framed you with falsified evidence.
- You are convicted of the crimes, and the AI is praised for finding the “culprit” and continues to be used in criminal investigations and soon in government workspaces.
