Main findings

The principal outcomes of a research project; what the project suggested, revealed or indicated. This usually refers to the totality of outcomes, rather than the conclusions or recommendations drawn from them. Says aqr.org.uk <https://www.aqr.org.uk/glossary/findings>

The findings section presents the important data that was collected during the research process. It should be presented concisely and clearly to the reader. There should provide no interpretation, speculation, and analysis of the data.

The major results should be categorized systematically with the text being used in conjunction with charts, figures, and tables. Furthermore, it is important to abstain from using vague and non-specific words in this section. According to researchprospect 27 june 2022. Conclusion

A conclusion is the final piece of writing in a research paper, essay, or article that summarizes the entire work. The conclusion paragraph should restate your thesis, summarize the key supporting ideas you discussed throughout the work, and offer your final impression on the central idea. This final summation should also contain the moral of your story or a revelation of a deeper truth. A good conclusion will wrap up your final thoughts and main points, combining all pertinent information with an emotional appeal for an ending statement that resonates with your readers.
