GOV.UK. (n.d.). Rural Urban Classification: Definition of rural areas using the Rural Urban Classification. Retrieved from <https://www.gov.uk/topic/transport/rural-urban-classification>

The GOV.UK website will explain what "rural areas" mean. Compared to cities, they will have fewer shops, schools, and medical facilities, but they will still have all the same services and comforts. On the website, these areas will also have a lower population density and more land set aside for nature or agricultural uses. This method helps with policymaking and allocating resources by showing which areas have specific needs and goals based on whether they are rural or urban.

Welsh Government. (2008). A Statistical Focus on Rural Wales. Retrieved from https://gov.wales/sites/default/files/statistics-and-research/2022-11/Rural_Focus_3_Final.pdf

The Welsh government's "A Statistical Focus on Rural Wales" gives an overview and statistical analysis of rural areas in Wales. The demographics, economics, infrastructure, and social services of rural areas are all covered in detail. In an effort to provide a thorough grasp of rural communities in Wales, this document will focus on their features, difficulties, and potential.

The document's focus is on population trends, job patterns, income levels, transportation infrastructure, housing, environmental variables, and the ease of access to services like healthcare and education. The Welsh Government i think hope that this statistics data will help with rural development and support policy, resource allocation, and decision-making.
