

Box
7.5

Pioneer Projects: Examples of Best Practice

Islington	- Care navigators commissioned from the voluntary sector - Development of integrated training framework - Integrated community ageing team - Proactive work with care homes - Delivering integrated digital care record - Linking personalised health and social care budgets
Nottingham.	- Relationship between councils and CCGs - Assisted technology strategy - Transforming care in care homes - System wide urgent care - Empowering people with long-term conditions to live independently
Leeds	- Leeds care record - Technology enabled care – mental health habitat with digital solutions
Cheshire	- Enabling people to live more independently through personalisation and assistive technology - Integrated case management for individuals with chronic needs - Joint approach to performance framework and workforce development - Shared care record - Development of integrated personalised intermediate care services
Sheffield	- Independent living solutions in commissioning - Co-design of active support and recovery - Community support workers project

Source: Based on NHS England (2016d).

Wider dimensions

With the voluntary sector – The voluntary sector is networked into overall provision and tends to have a more extensive role in social care, through partnership working with local authority services and health bodies or provision through commissioning. Voluntary bodies normally operate with an independent identity but will attempt to align their activity with other services and this would apply to integrationist requirements. A Life after Stroke community service provided by the third sector Stroke Association involved: family and carer support, communication support, and long-term support through the use of coordinators. The integrated role of the service was designed to follow on from the acute and active rehabilitation phase of stroke recovery, complementing the statutory health service provision by adding a longer aspect of care as well as supplementing and bridging the link