Explain the health and social care system in the UK, its origin, and different challenges facing by the system

- In the United Kingdom we, use the NHS as our health and socialcare system as well as private entities. The NHS was founded and mainly developed after the end of world war 2 as a new way to keep the people of the United Kingdom health, this was due to the new political development within the country.
- How they did this? They were able to achieve this as they gave free health care to all people within the united kingdom, making health issues easier to heal as the doctors and the nurses were waiting and ready for them. The four domains the NHS has stuck with since day one are;
 - 1. Preventing people from dying premature.
 - 2. Enhancing peoples quality of life with long term conditions.
 - 3. Helping people recover from epidosdes of ill healthy or following injury.
 - 4. Back to point 2, the whole point was to make the United Kingdom residents had the ability to go toa free and secure health care system, even if they did not have money to do so.

Explain the importance of partnership working, effective communication, and record-keeping in healthy and social care

- The relationships of working in partners is good, Introduces you to new people and get new ideas which may lead to expansion of your working in health and social care. This involves the principles of partnership working for example; you have to be honest to either your colleagues or the service user, you have to be open, trustworthy to achieve common purpose. partnership working allows services to be delivered in a joined up way.
- There is exchange of clear information and instructions on care needs, positive development of positive relationship. There's Effective communication in the process of exchanging ideas, thoughts, knowledge and information. The aim is to fulfill the possible manner. The patients need to feel safe enough to communicate honestly and openly with their care providers to receive effective treatments. Effective communication in health and social makes a life or death difference. It's important because we understand that effective communication in healthy and social care organisation starts with recognising the importance of listening to one another . Also patients need to communicate with care staff and administrators together with doctors and family members such that problems can listened to. Communication in healthcare gets easier when we all ask questions and prepare to listen.
- It's important to have good record keeping in health and social care as an aspect for professionals because it contributes to the circulation of information amongst the different teams involved in the patient's treatment or care. It isn't just necessary, but it's crucial for providing effective care. You can improve the health of the residents, the efficiency of your setting and better comply with CQC regulations, just by having a written reference of the actions and events that took place to look on and learn from. It's also important to have a proper system in place so nothing is accidentally missed and as much detail can be entered efficiently.

Describe the important legislation and policies of health and social care

- The important legislation and policies of health and social care is to ensure that a person know how to behave in a society. It also controls and certify that everyone follows the rules and law that should go after. Therefore, it's important that laws exist, to establish a common relationship. Legislation at all degrees can serve several purposes. It's used to regulate activities and authorize certain actions. Therefore, it's important that the law exist because its basic function is to establish a common relationship.
- As I mentioned before, the purpose of policies is to bring uniformity to corporate behaviours, and therefore reduce the risk of a wanted circumstance.
