

Task 2: Reflection – Research and Planning Skills

What's this task about?

This task is your chance to reflect on your learning so far. You've already completed a mini presentation and planning task. Now, before writing your report, we want you to look back at what you've learned about:

- Researching a topic
- Presenting your ideas
- Challenges you faced with your presentation

We also want you to look forward and think about:

- Actions to improve
- Further steps needed to Prepare for Task 3

This task is about your process – not your topic.

Top Tips for Reflecting

- Be honest – reflection is not about being “perfect”
- Use examples from your own experience
- Use “I” statements (e.g. I found it difficult to...)
- Avoid simply describing what you did – explain what you learned and what you'll change

Using Sources

- Both the slides from our classes and sources (e.g. web resources or books) can help you identify:
 - What a good/bad example of research looks like.
 - What a good/bad example of a presentation looks like.
 - Why things go well or poorly when researching or presenting.
 - What steps you can take to do better next time.
- You are not expected to present a formal reference list, but you may want to refer to something you have read in your reflection.
