Job description

Joining our friendly and supportive smoking and tobacco team, you can advance your career in Public Health whilst helping to address health inequalities in our communities. We are part of the wider Nottinghamshire Public Health team, who enjoy the challenge of working together to develop public health initiatives and drive them through to completion.

Together with our partners, we have a collective ambition to see smoking among adults in Nottinghamshire reduced to 5% or lower by 2035. You'll help us to achieve this aim by supporting the delivery of elements of the locally agreed strategy, such as preventing smoking uptake, treating tobacco dependency, regulating tobacco products and extending smoke-free environments. With a passion for improving health, you'll be able to present complex information clearly in order to influence decision-makers and command the confidence of others. You'll have a flexible approach to be able to adapt to specific work areas.

We're looking for someone educated to degree level (or with equivalent demonstrated experience) with knowledge of Public Health work and context. You'll be aware of how social, economic, and environmental factors can influence health and will have experience of working with others to achieve shared objectives.

In return, we are committed to your personal development, and offer an excellent benefits package. Nottinghamshire County Council also has an NHS Pension Direction Order in place, which means that we are able to provide ongoing access to the NHS Pension Scheme (NHSPS) where we recruit eligible new joiners to public health roles who are already in the NHSPS.

The council has adopted a hybrid working strategy, enabling staff to use a blended approach of home and office working that suit individuals' circumstances and business need. The formal office base for this post is County Hall, West Bridgford, or Meadow House, Mansfield, which you will be expected to work from as and when required.
