Parents evening

This is an opportunity for all teachers to raise any concerns about any children but to also talk about their progress in class.

Tray and display
An opportunity for the children to gain knowledge and to challenge themselves on what work they are capable of doing

Planned topic days
An opportunity for the children to plan a day where the parents or carers come to visit and learn about the work that they're doing

Stay and play
An opportunity for the children to learn about different textures and about the environment

Support for children, parents and carers with the transition from nursery to school

The school has many links with flying start, play groups, parents and toddler groups the aim is to help understand the children and what needs and how they can be supported whilst being transitioned into school. Some teachers engage in home visits they find this super beneficial as they get to know the children where the children feel the most safe so that they are able to understand the home life for the children too.

The school likes to involve all parents, carers and children with the new curriculum. There are frequently asked questionnaires sent out via their social media page which allows the parents or carers to also give their own opinion and also feedback, this helps the school to ensure that all children feel safe and happy at what works they take part in. This also allows the school to select their work. In order to give the children the best education possible. The school also likes to share with parents and carers with what goes on in the classroom whether this is via Google Classroom or uploading the children's work or recording them in a singing session or taking part in PE.

Forest schools
The instructional setting of the forest school gives the kids the chance to express themselves. This will also inspire kids to be disorganised and to use their imagination once a week. It also allows kids a chance to grow socially and personally, aids in the development of their communication skills, and teaches them about the outdoors and the surrounding natural environment. They will support their emotional wellbeing while assisting them in improving their interpersonal skills and academic knowledge.

Parents, teacher, and friends association (PTFA)

The PTFA is good for parents, carers and teachers to be able to become engaged with the children and the school. This provides them with the opportunity for them to be able to organise events for the school year such as charity events, summer fairs etc so that the parents have a say in what their children are taking part in throughout the year. This will also mean they will have more involvement within their children's school experiences.

Family support officer

The family support officer's in school are there to support the parents in any life-changing situations or issues they might have regarding their children. Coffee mornings are the most popular especially for the parents who need to talk and for those that are struggling. They are there to make a positive impact of the child learning and well-being to be able to get them through the school days and to ensure no trouble. The main priority is to ensure that the children amongst these families are safe. The family support officers will also help out the parents for example if the parents aren't able to take the children to their doctors appointment then they will take them so they don't miss out

Providing support for new families

Providing the supports for new families coming to the school is vitally important and is essential to form trust. When you're asking parents to fill in surveys will benefit the teachers as they will get to know the parents on different levels. Pupil profiles are set in every classroom in order for the teachers to gain a sense of who they are and what they like to do outside of school.

The teachers within the school learn sign language to help with engagement with the children or families that are unable to communicate
