CONCLUSION

Case study

- Miss A is 35 years old, woman and lives in a residential home. she has problems with her mental and physical health such as retinal failure and diabetes. She also suffers from being emotionally unstable personality disorder EUPD.
- Miss A requires a social worker which is common within the United Kingdoms legislation that requires that people who live in a residential home must have access to a social.
- This study took place in 2015 this is when miss A had to undergo an assessment to see if she has capacity. The assessment found that Miss A was stable and showed a good understanding into her own personal health problems. she was then deemed to have capacity to make her own decisions and to live independently.
- Miss A wanted to live on her own and to move away from the residential home. she then applied for a council house in which put through to the department of housing for the council.
- Miss A got quite aggressive because she was not deemed a priority to get housing straight away. Because Miss A was not pushed to the front of the council housing list she then had a massive decline in her mental health and was not deemed to have capacity.

- 35 years old
- Women
- Lives in a residential home
- Mental health
- Health complications such as visual impairments, renal failure, diabetes does not state if it's 1 or 2 and has emotionally unstable personality disorder EUPD.
- Social worker (2015) for the needs assessment to assess her eligibility for services under the care act 2015.
- She did not want any help from her social worker on any services that would help her emotionally unstable personality disorder
- Pass around to different departments such as AMHP, The child and adolescent mental health services CAMHS, doctors and independent practitioners.

Fact's about the case study

(Image 3 Clareville. 2018).

- The Care Act was created in twenty fourteen but came into power on April twenty fifteen.
- It replaced the overall majority law that was regarding to carers and the macro community of people that they will care for.
- It will look at the way in the local authorities carry out the job role of carer's and the assessments that they are legally required to carry out.
- it also looks at local authorities and the way they regulate who is eligible for support.
- When it comes to the Care Act it is for adults that are in care and the aim is to support them.
- The care act also has some protection for children that are in need for care and support.
- The parents who are carers for children that are within the needs and care system. Will come under the Children and Families Act twenty fourteen. It is the same for young adults who are carer's

The legislation that's implemented

Mental Health Act 1983

(Image 4 Creighton and partners .2016)

- The Mental Health Act of nineteen eighty three is implemented within England and Wales
- It was updated in two thousand and seven.
- It states that the macro community of people who have mental health problems, have rights
- The Mental Health Act nineteen eighty three is divided into different parts they will have information on
- Your rights in the case of being detained in hospital against your personal wishes.
- Your family's rights when a person is being detained.
- Your rights when you are being detained within a hospital or within the criminal justice system.
- Your rights when you are leaving a hospital, that will include how to have your section removed and within your care plan

(Mind. 2018)

- It also covers the assessment and the overall treatment within a hospital or criminal justice system
- A macro communities and micro persons treatment within the community.
- The majority of people who will receive inpatient treatment on a psychiatric ward will have already agreed to be placed into a hospital as a informal patients.
- But in contrasted over half are within a hospital without their micro agreement this is know as a formal patient.
- this is because they have been detained under the Mental Health Act nineteen eighty three
- If you are a formal patient within a hospital you will more than likely lose some of your rights such

Risk's within the case study

Her case had taken six months to be completed.

Her Family life broke down

She ended up homeless at a higher risk of being in a domestic relationship and being a victim of sexual assault (independent.2018)

More Hospital visits

Suicidal

Aggressive

Frequent police arrests

Having neuromas relationships with strange men over the internet and meeting men in real life. From this Miss A received gifts from these men such as money.

How this could have been avoided

By providing an experienced staff member

Explaining that she might not get a house right away

Not passing her around to different departments

The issues about the case study

Miss A wanted to use her disability to jump to the front of the line when it came to getting house.

Miss A was being passed around to different departments

The world CHALLENGING BEHAVIOUR should not be used because it does not give any in depth detail on what has happened.

Did not give much details about Miss A personal past. Such as how long has she had mental problems, how long she has lived in a residential home, her personal background and how experienced was her social worker.

It Does not say what happened after the end of the case study about Miss A.

Does not state what country she is in.

Theory of Human Motivation

The theory of human motivation should be viewed from the bottom to the top.

physiological level

safety needs

love and belonging

esteem

self-actualization

Because of the issues that Miss A had suffered she will be missing multiple levels from this theory. An example of this is self-actualization (Maslow, Town, and Town, Stephen 2013)

Conclusion

That Miss A needed more support during the hard time after not being able to get a house.

That the government needs to use prevention rather than just fixing a problem when it pops up

To stop passing around service users from department to department

That the United Kingdom needs more housing because there is not enough.
