Module Learning Outcomes (from module syllabus)
1. To foster critical evaluation, reflection, and interpretation relevant to the individual students' practice. 2. To challenge the student to identify, understand, and contextualise underlying patterns within their work so that they may go on to construct sustainable practices.

TASK DESCRIPTION

Students must work on two artefacts for this assignment:

- A personal showreel (no more than 1 minute 30 seconds in length)
- A collaborative group exhibition of their completed game idea from the Major Project

Each student must create a personal showreel demonstrating work in a chosen area of development (e.g. technical, concept art, animation, modelling, etc.) that you are hoping to pursue professionally following graduation from your degree course. This should display your skills in an industry role that you hope to aspire to and hopefully enter when beginning your journey in your creative career.

The showreel should be professionally designed and formatted and should be informed by industry standards and/or expectations of the level of work expected of a graduate.

You will also collaboratively organize and produce an exhibition of your Major Project work (and additionally, a portfolio/selection of work that illustrates your role and displays original content created within the development team). This should include elements such as the following:

- Control systems/guides for exhibition attendees
- Supporting portfolios of work and promotional business cards
- Completed logo design and promotional material to draw attention to your exhibit (e.g. monitor surrounds, posters, flyers, etc.)

Personal showreels should be recorded in 1080p HD Quality (1920 x 1080) and submitted on a pen drive to assessment staff. Your group exhibition will be available for visitors to the University to view at the end of the summer term and will be assessed prior to the public opening of the exhibition.

GUIDANCE FOR STUDENTS IN THE COMPLETION OF TASKS

NOTE: The guidance offered below is linked to the five generic assessment criteria overleaf.

1. Engagement with Literature Skills (Marks available: 15 out of 100)

Your work must be informed and supported by scholarly material that is relevant to and focused on the task(s) set; you should make use of scholarly reviews and primary sources, where appropriate (for example, refereed research articles and/or original materials appropriate to the discipline). You should provide evidence that you have accessed a wide range of sources, which may be academic, governmental and industrial; these sources may include academic journal articles, textbooks, current news articles, organisational documents, and websites. You should consider the credibility of your sources; academic journals are normally highly credible sources while websites require careful consideration/selection and should be used sparingly. Any sources you use should be current and up-to-date, mostly published within the last five years or so, though seminal/important works in the field may be older. You must provide evidence of your research/own reading throughout your work, using a suitable referencing system, including in-text citations in the main body of your work and a reference list at the end of your work.

Guidance specific to this assessment:

- Research in this instance would take the form of looking at existing showreels, stands, exhibitions and installations. Look at what the general standards are, e.g. quality of work submitted, length of showreels, information provided, visually appealing or attractive promotional imagery used to promote games or similar products, etc.
- There are effective ways in which to communicate certain emotions using colour and shape in your promotional material and related content – this should not just form part of the research for a portfolio but all of your visual work going forward.

2. Knowledge and Understanding Skills (Marks available: 10 out of 100)

At level 6, you should be able to demonstrate coherent and detailed knowledge and a systematic understanding of the subject area, at least some of which is informed by the latest research and/or advanced scholarship within the discipline. You should be aware of the uncertainty, ambiguity and limits of knowledge. Your work must demonstrate the growing extent of your knowledge and systematic understanding of concepts and underlying principles associated with the subject area. Knowledge relates to the facts, information and skills you have acquired through your learning. You demonstrate your understanding by interpreting the meaning of the facts and information (knowledge). This means that you need to select and include in your work the concepts, techniques, models, theories, etc. appropriate to the task(s) set. You should be able to explain the theories, concepts, etc. meaningfully to show your understanding. Your mark/grade will also depend upon the extent to which you demonstrate your knowledge and understanding; ideally each should be complete and detailed, with comprehensive coverage.

Guidance specific to this assessment:

- Application of knowledge derived from research you have obtained and observed is essential. Look at existing showreels and related promotional work – why are some efforts more effective than others? What looks particularly visually distinctive (or suited to the tone/theme of your project work)? How can you use similar techniques to enhance your own work?

- The design of your exhibition should take into consideration your target audience (or any audience for that matter!). Consider usability, accessibility, appropriate input devices, etc. to ensure that people are not left confused or distressed by the experience when engaging with your exhibit.

3. Cognitive and Intellectual Skills (Marks available: 10 out of 100)

You should be able to: critically evaluate evidence, arguments, assumptions, abstract concepts and data some of which are at the forefront of a discipline (and that may be incomplete) to devise and sustain arguments, to make judgements and/or solve problems; describe and comment upon particular aspects of current research, or equivalent advanced scholarship, in the discipline Your work must contain evidence of logical, analytical thinking, evaluation and synthesis. For example, to examine and break information down into parts, make inferences, compile, compare and contrast information. This means not just describing what! But also justifying: Why? How? When? Who? Where? At what cost? At all times, you must provide justification for your arguments and judgements. Evidence that you have reflected upon the ideas of others within the subject area is crucial to you providing a reasoned and informed debate within your work. Furthermore, you should provide evidence that you are able to make sound judgements and convincing arguments using data and concepts. Sound, valid conclusions are necessary and must be derived from the content of your work. Where relevant, alternative solutions and recommendations may be proposed.

Guidance specific to this assessment:

- Gathering research is important but so is analysing what you have found. Look at examples of work that you feel are visually strong but also consider others that are not – ask yourself why this may be the case? If you can understand why something is not particularly striking or effective visually, you may be able to apply this to your own work and avoid making the same mistakes.

4. Practical Skills (Marks available: 40 out of 100)

At level 6, you should be able to apply the methods and techniques that you have learned to review, consolidate, extend and apply your knowledge and understanding, and to initiate and carry out projects. You will deploy accurately established techniques of analysis and enquiry relevant to the discipline, and apply them in complex and unpredictable contexts, to devise and sustain arguments and/or to solve problems. You should be able to frame appropriate questions to achieve a solution - or identify a range of solutions. You should be able to demonstrate how the subject-related concepts and ideas relate to real world situations and/or a particular context. How do they work in practice? You will deploy models, methods, techniques, and/or theories, in that context or circumstances, to assess current situations, perhaps to formulate plans or solutions to solve problems, or to create artefacts, some of which may be innovative and creative. This is likely to involve, for instance, the use of real world artefacts, examples and cases, the application of a model within an organisation and/or benchmarking one theory or organisation against others based on stated criteria. You should show awareness of the limitations of concepts and theories when applied in particular contexts.

Guidance specific to this assessment:

- Practical skills are a significant portion of this particular assessment as the artefacts being produced are very visual in nature. Consistency is key with collaborative efforts – make sure in group work that you maintain a consistent tone in your work otherwise each member's contribution may look completely unrelated and weaken the overall aesthetic of your exhibition.
- Use of clear fonts, simple designs and striking colour combinations will help your work feel more memorable. You must conduct research to support this otherwise your work may not be as impactful.

Additionally, for visual design work in particular, a base understanding of colour theory and design fundamentals will naturally help enhance the visual quality of your work.

- Careful video and audio editing is essential in your showreel. Look for free-to-use music intended for public use and use this to determine the pacing of your work. Rough drafts and test renders can stand-in for finished pieces – you should aim to have a work-in-progress showreel as soon as possible.*
- Project/game logos should be clearly visible on your exhibition – no visitor should be left wondering what the game is called when visiting your exhibit.*

5. Transferable Skills for Life and Professional Practice (Marks available: 25 out of 100)

Your work must provide evidence of the qualities and transferable skills necessary for graduate-level employment requiring the exercise of initiative and personal responsibility and decision-making in complex and unpredictable circumstances. This includes demonstrating: the learning ability for professional development to advance existing skills and acquire new competences of a professional nature that will enable you to assume significant responsibility within organisations; that you can initiate and complete tasks and procedures, whether individually and/or collaboratively; that you can use appropriate media to effectively communicate information, arguments and analysis in a variety of forms to specialist and non-specialist audiences; fluency of expression; clarity and effectiveness in presentation and organisation. Work should be coherent and well-structured in presentation and organisation.

Guidance specific to this assessment:

- Using the research you have obtained, you must observe and adhere to professional standards to ensure that your work will be suitable for self-promotion moving forward. Previous graduates have used these showreels to apply for industry-related jobs and have been successful – could you be next?*
- Check your work for spelling errors, even on posters and flyers – what will an audience think if the work looks rushed? If a visitor from the games industry were to attend, what impressions would they get from the work you have presented?*
- Plan your exhibition and showreel in good time. A panicked last-minute job will always look like one!*
