Question 1.

The arrest for Rachel Jones is the legal because Elements of Arrest subsection 24PACE

2.1 A lawful arrest requires two elements:

A person's involvement or suspected involvement or attempted involvement in the commission of a criminal offense;

AND

Reasonable grounds for believing that the person's arrest is necessary.

- both elements must be satisfied, and
- it can never be necessary to arrest a person unless it is reasonable grounds to suspect them of committing an offense.

But in the rush the policeman who arrested her did not tell her her rights and did not tell her the reason for the arrest, which is a mistake according to the law Human Right act 1998 . after arresting her, he takes her to the detention center and no one offers her a lawyer or explains her rights.

There is a lot of evidence missing and we have not seen video observations of the severe physical injuries imposed on the victim, but the police officer heard the screams and saw that the two women were arguing when leaving, the victim said that she had been hit and was visibly injured.

Information to be given on Arrest

The arrested person must be informed that they have been arrested, even if this fact is obvious, and of the relevant circumstances of the arrest in relation to both the above elements. The custody officer must be informed of these matters on arrival at the police station. See paragraphs 2.9, 3.3 and Note 3 and Code C paragraph 3.4.

A person who is arrested, or further arrested, must be informed at the time if practicable, or if not, as soon as it becomes practicable thereafter, that they are under arrest and of the grounds and reasons for their arrest,"

Question 2.

The Code for Crown Prosecutors

The Code for Crown Prosecutors is a public document, issued by the Director of Public Prosecutions, that sets out the general principles Crown Prosecutors should follow when they make decisions on cases.

Is there enough evidence against the defendant?

When deciding whether there is enough evidence to charge, Crown Prosecutors must consider whether evidence can be used in court and is reliable and credible, and there is no other material that might affect the sufficiency of evidence. Crown Prosecutors must be satisfied there is enough evidence to provide a "realistic prospect of conviction" against each defendant.

In pending the law and the code(The Code for Crown Prosecutors)

, the case has enough evidence to continue and be examined properly, we have found phone messages that can be reviewed.

Is there enough evidence against the defendant?

Yes we have , "At 11 a.m. today, police officers executed a search warrant at 1 Acacia Avenue. During the search, police found 10 packages of a white powder, later determined to be cocaine, and 1.5 kg of cannabis, divided between several "pouches". These drugs were located in the garage of the property." a large amount of drugs was discovered, which according to the law are in private property. from the case study and the situation we understand that other persons are also involved, then we understand that a person lives who is not part of the family and has no family relationship with him. We have evidence of the two suspected twin brothers and their mother who is the tenant of the property where prohibited substances were found, we have evidence of their income and their past. We also have evidence about the past of the woman who is also a suspect.
