Me myself and I was an extension of my introduction into photography, I recorded a video of my process as, at college level none of my lecturers really understood the process so it was something for me to try and record. This process was simple, the console has the ability to record so this was not a problem, this was the first time I recorded my creative process and I would like to take this further in future works.

My laptop has a inbuilt microphone that I could speak into, I found the challenge of what to talk about the hardest aspect of this assignment, so on a personal note I chose to explain my creative journey so far. This began by virtual photography so with a script I spoke about my experience with the medium and some mini achievements.

I then spoke about my personal goals briefly in the realm of real world photography and finding my medium, and then referencing my university experience as being a opportunity of self-discovery briefly as well.

The final part of the video consisted of a silhouette with a highlighted area, the highlighted area is supposed to illustrate with a moving image inside it, a work in progress in my camera work journey.

I used movani to create this video it was rather simple it was drag and drop for most of the process, I did have an issue with the company name on the video so had I a chance to take this video again I would try a different software.
