Playing with the garage

Callum had recently started at a new setting. One morning, on arriving, he chose to play with the farm and immediately became involved with the animals. After playing for a while Callum left the farm activity and went outdoors to play. He decided to have a ride in the pedal car. After a while Callum noticed the garage, cars, lorries and other vehicles and started playing with them. Throughout these sessions, although Callum played by himself and had minimal interaction with the other children in the group, he was having fun.

The cows in the field

In their game, the children were trying to put the correct amount of animals in each field on the mat, according to the number displayed in the field.

When I asked them to put three cows in a ploughed field Sam replied: "There isn't any food for the cows in the ploughed field, they should be in a green field. But it would be all right to put pigs in the ploughed field because they like mud." All the children involved could understand the reasoning and began moving other animals around into more suitable places, but still took into account the number in the field.

In this activity the children were able to develop and extend appropriate vocabulary relating to position, and their understanding of spatial awareness. In addition, Sam communicated his ideas in his own unique way and the children developed their cooperative skills with their peers.
