I am a student at university, and this is not one of the easiest things to do in my life but still is one of the biggest challenges in my entire life. I joined this university with big hope and full of life, because this is a new beginning for me with new people and a different background, The first day I started university, I was very excited. The emotion overwhelmed me. It was one of the most interesting days in that period, because for a long time in my life I did not go to school, but it still was a good start at the end of the day. In first day, I met all my colleagues and my two modules' teachers, very good impression at the first sight about all other student from my class, about their study, about their jobs ,also I been impressed about my teacher they have a high expectation from us and they have a high experience in what they are doing in the class.

Learning about all the techniques and tools that were given to us in the class was a challenge, but I had to push myself to finish it. What I found interesting was the way to reference, and how we used a website to create them for us and guide us on how to do it. I used the reference (Cope, 2025) which he explained in the article how to master time Mangement and different ways to do it. Sean, Cope (2021) 'Time Managing strategies. This is called text citations. In the class I had to learn different modules which were new to me. From the start it was a challenge, but I knew that it was going to be an interesting day for me, because every time I learned a new subject it became challenging. The most important thing was that I needed to use a laptop; it was very good, and I had learned how to use it very well. One thing I have seen at the university is that you need to manage your time and i realized how independent some things are such as managing your time, keeping up with daily tasks and many more. I also learned that I need to take control of my time schedule and stay organized using the knowledge I learned from my class to manage my time and one of them being to use a calendar to put your tasks from start to finish and go through it through the day. I also set clear goals like finishing my tasks on time, completing essays, and quizzes before deadlines. Another thing that i learned is the ability to research key information and understand where and how to look for it. I used this in my classroom when our lecturer told us to find articles and about time management, so we can reference the author's name, year of publication and all this closed in brackets.

Overall, I feel confident with researching and finding information online. Unfortunately, we all have our weaknesses and for me paraphrasing was a challenge for me. I didn't have the skill and knowledge to change all the words, not even most, but I tried my best and changed at least 2 or 3 words per sentence. Starting university was a big step in my life. I realize that to be successful you don't need to be smart but to have the right skills to work with and to also be full concentration and dedication. Things like managing my time were also important as reading and taking notes. I think that I have improved so much on my Communication skills when talking to my classmates about tasks in our class and personally I think that doing so has also helped my vocabulary tremendously. I feel like I could improve on my referencing as I made so many mistakes when we were told to reference from a book, article or any source online. What I got wrong was mixing up where to add the commas and in what order the name, year, title and full stops. I successfully managed to reference it with the help from my teacher and explained it in a slower, better way. I think that in my next semester I will work harder, concentrate, and will give my best to finish tasks and assessments. I will also learn from my mistakes and hopefully correct myself next semester. Another thing I am going to try to do is revise at home or at a local library to unlock my maximum capability for work given to me. When the first task was given to me, I would instantly panic and ask other classmates about what we are doing instead of doing it myself, which I think I could have done if it wasn't for my lack of vocabulary. Halfway through the course, I started to develop a habit of writing in my notebook work that my teacher would present on the smartboard. What I feel good about is that I could speak to my teacher about everything including feedback on my work, websites I can use, strategies to use and many other tips and tricks. This boosted my confidence and gave me a higher push. Also, the submission links made me feel lost and I didn't really know how to figure it out, but I got there in the end with the help of the teacher.

In conclusion, I feel proud with me, and I think I have done well throughout this course. I will come back stronger and more confident and hopefully with more knowledge for the tasks that will give to us next term. I would like to thank my teacher for helping me so much and I would be able to finish this term without Mr. Akash. I would also like to thank my classmates for being helpful and finally Me, as I pushed myself so much through this module.
