

Web links – Chapter 2

www.acas.org.uk is the official website of the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service. This contains a wide range of information, advice and guidance on the main process of employment relations such as bargaining, involvement and participation and conciliation. It is also a source of useful and detailed advice in relation to key aspects of employment law.

www.bis.gov.uk is the website of the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills and outlines the main provisions of employment legislation. It also provides a good way of keeping up to date with government thinking and policy on Employment Relations.

www.cbi.org.uk is the website of the CBI, the central employers' organisation in the UK. This website contains reports, press releases and general information on the CBIs position on a range of employment relations issues. It gives the student an insight into employer perspectives on the employment relationship.

www.cipd.co.uk is the official website of the Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development. The site contains a wealth of information on key aspects of employment relations but also detailed research reports covering issues such as absence management, leadership conflict in the workplace and employee engagement.

www.tuc.org is the official website of the Trades Union Congress which is the umbrella body for trade unions in the UK. The site contains basic information on the trade union movement, research reports and other information from which the student can get a clear idea of union views and positions on important employment relations issues.