

London

JOB MARKET

1.02

For every person aged 16 - 64 in the capital there is at least one job available, it is the skills gaps that are worth noting

20%

The average weekly wage in London is significantly higher (20%) than the rest of the UK, but living costs are also much higher

1/2

Over half (54%) the workers in London have a Level 4 qualification or higher, this means competition for graduate jobs is very high

97%

The vast majority of businesses in the city employ less than 50 people, these are classed as micro or small businesses

59%

More than half of people employed in London hold professional, technical or managerial positions, only 12% of employees are considered unskilled

1/10

Approximately 10% of people hold jobs in wholesale and retail and a further 10% in administration and office support roles