MY EXPERIENCE OF THE FOUNDATION YEAR

Ellie Cadman

Main modules

Introductions to university

looking at our first module this focused on looking into settling into university life. Understanding how to reference, essay plans, and looking into how this foundation year will cover the other modules.

Introduction to humanities

Focusing on details of boundaries and how they would affect my chosen subject of maritime archaeology. Using skills from the past modules to create a powerpoint and essay looking at how I would face boundaries in this position and overcome this.

Academic skills

This module focused on developing my skills to fit to university standard. Coming from A-levels my standard of referencing and essay plans need to be altered to this standard, preparing me to first year university.

Independent investigation

One of my last modules followed an essay plan of a 1500 word plan on a chosen project using sources to evaluate the question. Then later to create this project. Using a range of skills to complete this like referencing and literacy skills.

Being human

In this module this was the main focus on archeology and followed a graveyard report on the study of death and the ritual behind this and how this has changed in the 21st century. Gathering information from real artefacts and then comparing this research to other articles and the creating quantitative research.

How this content developed my skills.

Looking on how this foundation year has developed my skills in comparison to my past education
