Module Learning Outcomes (from module syllabus)

1. Recognise critical and contextual dimensions of the students chosen discipline (Typography)

3. Effectively apply a range of analytical, investigative and experimental approaches to their chosen medium.

TASK DESCRIPTION

Introduction

Ultimately, it is a graphic designer's aim to use type and images to entertain, inform, persuade, and enlighten an observing audience as effectively as they can. It is a fast moving industry, and the progression of new technologies inform trends, and different ways to communicate with our audience.

As digital platforms become increasingly popular, we can utilise these technologies to enhance how we captivate and hold our audiences.

This module is all about exploring a visual narrative, and to push our existing understanding of core design principles such as typography, colour and composition to engage with our audience on a different platform.

Brief

Take a few lines of dialogue from a speech, film or poem, or lyrics from a song and communicate the pace and emotion of the piece through an unfolding piece of typographic narrative. What you produce should be at least 30 seconds long, but can be longer if you wish.

Develop your narrative as a storyboard on paper first, and hand this in with your final animation.

You will present and discuss your work to your peers on the hand in day.

You will produce a 500-word essay with an extensive bibliography based on 5 questions we will provide you.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A bibliography of primary and secondary texts is to be developed, under direction from an academic supervisor, by the student. Since the module comprises mostly independent study, it is up to the student to seek out secondary or archival material in the course of their research.

Supervisors will guide, and strongly encourage the research process, which may include online journals, audio-visual material, artefacts from Special Collections etc.

Text/hints and tips

The success of this project is in the planning. Don't dive straight into the software, sketch it all out first. See handbook for reading lists.

Work required

- A piece of kinetic typography no less than 30 seconds long

- Development storyboards on paper
- Evidence of research and trials
- 500-word evaluation

Submission Information

For the final submission, you will be required to present and discuss your animation to your peers. Please submit your rendered final clip, alongside the after effects files and any other digital files on a nominated computer on presentation day.

Your sketches, storyboards and any hardcopies should be submitted on the same day.

GUIDANCE FOR STUDENTS IN THE COMPLETION OF TASKS

NOTE: The guidance offered below is linked to the five generic assessment criteria overleaf.

1. Engagement with Literature Skills (Marks Available: 15 out of 100)

Guidance specific to this assessment: Research. What/who has influenced your work. Your research may range from text based resources such as books, magazines, websites to visual imagery and the development of practical processes. As this is a practical module the emphasis will be on the range and quality of research and not your referencing abilities. However, indication and credit should be given to design content that you have used that is not of your own creation. Also be sure to identify content that is of your own creation. (Content will usually consist of texts, images, photographs, illustrations, and graphic elements etc).

Your work must be informed and supported by scholarly material that is relevant to and focused on the task(s) set; you should make use of scholarly reviews and primary sources, where appropriate (for example, refereed research articles and/or original materials appropriate to the discipline). You should provide evidence that you have accessed a wide range of sources, which may be academic, governmental and industrial; these sources may include academic journal articles, textbooks, current news articles, organisational documents, and websites. You should consider the credibility of your sources; academic journals are normally highly credible sources while websites require careful consideration/selection and should be used sparingly. Any sources you use should be current and up-to-date, mostly published within the last five years or so, though seminal/important works in the field may be older. You must provide evidence of your research/own reading throughout your work, using a suitable referencing system, including in-text citations in the main body of your work and a reference list at the end of your work.

2. Knowledge and Understanding Skills (Marks Available: 20 out of 100)

Guidance specific to this assessment: Your knowledge and understanding of the core Graphic Design skills. Such as, Typography, layout design, use of colour, hierarchy of information, development of ideas and how these have been applied to your project work. Also, your consideration of the animation principles and the development of your project using appropriate methods such as storyboarding.

At level 6, you should be able to demonstrate coherent and detailed knowledge and a systematic understanding of the subject area, at least some of which is informed by the latest research and/or advanced scholarship within the discipline. You should be aware of the uncertainty, ambiguity and limits of knowledge. Your work must demonstrate the growing extent of your knowledge and systematic understanding of concepts and underlying principles associated with the subject area. Knowledge relates to the facts, information and skills you have acquired through your learning. You demonstrate your understanding by interpreting the meaning of the facts and information (knowledge). This means that you need to select and include in your work the concepts, techniques, models, theories, etc. appropriate to the task(s) set. You should be able to explain the theories, concepts, etc. meaningfully to show your understanding. Your mark/grade will also depend upon the extent to which you demonstrate your knowledge and understanding; ideally each should be complete and detailed, with comprehensive coverage.

3. Cognitive and Intellectual Skills (Marks Available: 20 out of 100)

Guidance specific to this assessment: The appropriateness of the design solution. Have a clear understanding of the basic design process by following these key stages:

What is the message that needs to be communicated, what are you trying to say?

Who is the target audience for the information, who are you saying it to?

How is the information to be communicated?

Evaluate: Has the design brief been answered? Are amendments/redesigns required?

You should be able to: critically evaluate evidence, arguments, assumptions, abstract concepts and data some of which are at the forefront of a discipline (and that may be incomplete) to devise and sustain arguments, to make judgements and/or solve problems; describe and comment upon particular aspects of current research, or equivalent advanced scholarship, in the discipline Your work must contain evidence of logical, analytical thinking, evaluation and synthesis. For example, to examine and break information down into parts, make inferences, compile, compare and contrast information. This means not just describing what! But also justifying: Why? How? When? Who? Where? At what cost? At all times, you must provide justification for your arguments and judgements. Evidence that you have reflected upon the ideas of others within the subject area is crucial to you providing a reasoned and informed debate within your work. Furthermore, you should provide evidence that you are able to make sound judgements and convincing arguments using data and concepts. Sound, valid conclusions are necessary and must be derived from the content of your work. Where relevant, alternative solutions and recommendations may be proposed.

4. Practical Skills (Marks Available: 30 out of 100)

Guidance specific to this assessment: : The use of professional design applications, processes and technologies to produce your project work. To complete your project work you may need to use several software applications, processes and technologies. Considerations should also be given to the method of the final outcome and the manner in which your work is to be presented.

At level 6, you should be able to apply the methods and techniques that you have learned to review, consolidate, extend and apply your knowledge and understanding, and to initiate and carry out projects. You will deploy accurately established techniques of analysis and enquiry relevant to the discipline, and apply them in complex and unpredictable contexts, to devise and sustain arguments and/or to solve problems. You should be able to frame appropriate questions to achieve a solution - or identify a range of solutions. You should be able to demonstrate how the subject-related concepts and ideas relate to real world situations and/or a particular context. How do they work in practice? You will deploy models, methods, techniques, and/or theories, in that context or circumstances, to assess current situations, perhaps to formulate plans or solutions to solve problems, or to create artefacts, some of which may be innovative and creative. This is likely to involve, for instance, the use of real world artefacts, examples and cases, the application of a model within an organisation and/or benchmarking one theory or organisation against others based on stated criteria. You should show awareness of the limitations of concepts and theories when applied in particular contexts.

5. Transferable Skills for Life and Professional Practice (Marks Available: 15 out of 100)

Guidance specific to this assessment: : Personal time management and project management. That you are prepared to engage in the class room environment and that you are ready to learn. That you are able to show evidence of self directed study beyond the time tabled sessions of the module.

Your work must provide evidence of the qualities and transferable skills necessary for graduate-level employment requiring the exercise of initiative and personal responsibility and decision-making in complex and unpredictable circumstances. This includes demonstrating: the learning ability for professional development to advance existing skills and acquire new competences of a professional nature that will enable you to assume significant responsibility within organisations; that you can initiate and complete tasks and procedures, whether individually and/or collaboratively; that you can use appropriate media to effectively communicate information, arguments and analysis in a variety of forms to specialist and non-specialist audiences; fluency of expression; clarity and effectiveness in presentation and organisation. Work should be coherent and well-structured in presentation and organisation.
