This is my microwave which in my digital life it is especially important and helping me to warm foods, some drinks and avoiding food waste. The microwave was created by an American engineer Percy Spencer who was assessing a radar tube called Magnetron at Raytheon Corporation in 1945. The man standing near the active machine and realised that his chocolate bar in his pocket has been melted so he tested the device with popcorn and an egg, he discovered that the microwave generated heat so quickly. He decided to design an enclosed metal box that trapped the electromagnetic energy putting it in a concentrated and safe area where food could be heated quickly. The first commercial microwave called Radarange and was released in 1946.
