

John O'Sullivan Feedback

John worked on set with Akron Productions, working on a fictional film about Alexander the Great called 'Sisygambis'. It was shot on a couple of locations at Swansea University including a cafe and a stage.

John was a Behind the Scenes photographer and runner on set. He was very hardworking and didn't stop for a second, constantly taking pictures and was always ready to help. He was a constant presence and didn't leave his guard down for a second. John was always ready to provide any help that he could for the cast and crew and was pointing out things that could be a possible issue, which was very helpful. John's pictures provided a very good overview of the day, capturing people busy at work and he had a wonderful eye for it. He sent over many pictures which were taken throughout the day and they all tell a story.

To improve in the future John could look into having a look at the camera settings a bit more and balancing the ISO, shutter speed and aperture as some pictures were a bit blurry or noisy. In terms of running, he was overall very good. In the future, it might be worth observing what's happening on set before speaking as there were a few moments where he pointed out something just as we were going for a take. Other than that, he was very good to have on set and would very much have him again!
