Bringing Music to Life

BIO

Phobosphear (aka Tim Corfield) is a British music producer and musician best known for playing in The Metros and creating his own music specializing in electronica soundscapes. With followers and subscribers on Facebook and Instagram, his talents have been used by several different artists across the UK. He has collaborated and performed with a few different artists such as S Ballard Music, Hugo Jones Media, Simon Hawes and many more. He has released singles, EPs, which can be heard on band camp and this site. He has involved in music since he was in secondary school and has been influenced by many different styles. In 2022 he was featured in the Reepham music festival with The Metros Norfolk leading indie and alternative covers band. In 2023, Phobosphear began his journey to becoming a music producer and is currently completing a Masters in Music Production. His aims are to provide music services to students in schools and to produce music in the style of electronica soundscapes!
