Module Learning Outcomes (from module syllabus)

Upon the successful completion of this module, the student should be able to:

- Critically examine health, education or wellbeing initiatives that have helped to develop a community
- Investigate and critically evaluate innovative digital technologies that could be used to develop communities now and in the future.

TASK DESCRIPTION

Communities are fluid groups and can vary wildly with respect to ethnicity, race, class, age and culture. An individual may belong to a number of different communities at any one time with a range of different binding characteristics. In looking at these binding characteristics, there will be a number of motivators that encourage activity within these communities.

Assessment Component 1: 20-minute Presentation (with accompanying PowerPoint)

Deliver an individual presentation in class (duration of 15-20 minutes) outlining an assessment of the health and social care needs of an existing community in the UK of your choice. You should consider the location, diversity, and changing demographics of modern society as well as current legislation and policy that is likely to impact the support and growth of such a community.

As part of this presentation, you should discuss the demographics, prevalent health issues, health risks, and possible existing means of communication of health and social care providers both internally (e.g. within the community groups, healthcare services), and externally (e.g., with agencies, organisations and other communities) paying attention to the digital technologies that are currently available to communicate health-related information to this community.

You should also consider:

- The wide variety of needs of the individuals, families and groups within your community (related to education, health and social care, employment, etc.)

- Concepts such as discrimination, prejudice, power, empowerment, equality and the rights of individuals and groups.
- The existing use of digital communication and social media in community development.

Note: All of the above will be discussed in-depth during our lectures.

GUIDANCE FOR STUDENTS IN THE COMPLETION OF TASKS

NOTE: The guidance offered below is linked to the five generic assessment criteria overleaf.

1. Engagement with Literature Skills

Your work must be informed and supported by scholarly material that is relevant to and focused on the task(s) set; you should make use of scholarly reviews and primary sources, where appropriate (for example, refereed research articles and/or original materials appropriate to the discipline). You should provide evidence that you have accessed a wide range of sources, which may be academic, governmental and industrial; these sources may include academic journal articles, textbooks, current news articles, organisational documents, and websites. You should consider the credibility of your sources; academic journals are normally highly credible sources while websites require careful consideration/selection and should be used sparingly. Any sources you use should be current and up-to-date, mostly published within the last five years or so, though seminal/important works in the field may be older. You must provide evidence of your research/own reading throughout your work, using a suitable referencing system, including in-text citations in the main body of your work and a reference list at the end of your work.

Guidance specific to this assessment: Your slides should all be cited by credible and relevant sources, including books, journals and appropriate websites which should be contemporary wherever possible. You should aim to include both supporting and contrasting statements to elucidate a complete picture. During your presentation you should cite verbally as well as in-text on the slides. Please use Harvard Referencing and ensure that there is a reference slide at the end of your presentation.

2. Knowledge and Understanding Skills

At level 6, you should be able to demonstrate coherent and detailed knowledge and a systematic understanding of the subject area, at least some of which is informed by the latest research and/or advanced scholarship within the discipline. You should be aware of the uncertainty, ambiguity and limits of knowledge. Your work must demonstrate the growing extent of your knowledge and systematic understanding of concepts and underlying principles associated with the subject area. Knowledge relates to the facts, information and skills you have acquired through your learning. You demonstrate your understanding by interpreting the meaning of the facts and information (knowledge). This means that you need to select and include in your work the concepts, techniques, models, theories, etc. appropriate to the task(s) set. You should be able to explain the theories, concepts, etc. meaningfully to show your understanding. Your mark/grade will also depend upon the extent to which you demonstrate your knowledge and understanding; ideally each should be complete and detailed, with comprehensive coverage.

Guidance specific to this assessment: You should elaborate upon the ideas and concepts identified within the literature you have read. With the inclusion of various sources, you should aim to construct your works in your own words and avoid the direct quotation of that of others demonstrating your own understanding of such ideas and clarifying and contextualising the information.

3. Cognitive and Intellectual Skills

You should be able to: critically evaluate evidence, arguments, assumptions, abstract concepts and data some of which are at the forefront of a discipline (and that may be incomplete) to devise and sustain arguments, to make judgements and/or solve problems; describe and comment upon particular aspects of current research, or equivalent advanced scholarship, in the discipline. Your work must contain evidence of logical, analytical thinking, evaluation and synthesis. For example, to examine and break information down into parts, make inferences, compile, compare and contrast information. This means not just describing what! But also justifying: Why? How? When? Who? Where? At what cost? At all times, you must provide justification for your arguments and judgements. Evidence that you have reflected upon the ideas of others within the subject area is crucial to you providing a reasoned and informed debate within your work. Furthermore, you should provide evidence that you are able to make sound judgements and convincing arguments using data and concepts. Sound, valid conclusions are necessary and must be derived from the content of your work. Where relevant, alternative solutions and recommendations may be proposed.

Guidance specific to this assessment: Engage in sound critical thinking and develop logical judgement and argument. From the literature you have amassed, you should aim to define two or more perspectives for each argument and from this draw sensible academic conclusions. You will ideally draw conclusions from the concepts covered within your work and consequently provide recommendations for future works of a similar vein.

4. Practical Skills

At level 6, you should be able to apply the methods and techniques that you have learned to review, consolidate, extend and apply your knowledge and understanding, and to initiate and carry out projects. You will deploy accurately established techniques of analysis and enquiry relevant to the discipline, and apply them in complex and unpredictable contexts, to devise and sustain arguments and/or to solve problems. You should be able to frame appropriate questions to achieve a solution - or identify a range of solutions. You should be able to demonstrate how the subject-related concepts and ideas relate to real world situations and/or a particular context. How do they work in practice? You will deploy models, methods, techniques, and/or theories, in that context or circumstances, to assess current situations, perhaps to formulate plans or solutions to solve problems, or to create artefacts, some of which may be innovative and creative. This is likely to involve, for instance, the use of real world artefacts, examples and cases, the application of a model within an organisation and/or benchmarking one theory or organisation against others based on stated criteria. You should show awareness of the limitations of concepts and theories when applied in particular contexts.

Guidance specific to this assessment: Clearly identify and explore the context of this assignment. You will demonstrate your understanding of research practices in addition to that of your ability to present and reference included information. Show your ability to identify and analyse problems/issues and propose possible solutions. Demonstrate knowledge of the application of concepts and theories into practice.

5. Transferable Skills for Life and Professional Practice

Your work must provide evidence of the qualities and transferable skills necessary for graduate-level employment requiring the exercise of initiative and personal responsibility and decision-making in complex and unpredictable circumstances. This includes demonstrating: the learning ability for professional development to advance existing skills and acquire new competences of a professional nature that will enable you to assume significant responsibility within organisations; that you can initiate and complete tasks and procedures, whether individually and/or collaboratively; that you can use appropriate media to effectively communicate information, arguments and analysis in a variety of forms to specialist and non-specialist audiences; fluency of expression; clarity and effectiveness in presentation and organisation. Work should be coherent and well-structured in presentation and organisation.

Guidance specific to this assessment: Ensure that your presentation is clear, informative and well-structured, follows a logical progression and is suitable for your intended audience. Follow the guidance given to ensure that the requirements of the task are met and academic standards are satisfied. An understanding of the importance of the need for change and recommendations for improvement should be illustrated.

STUDENT FEEDBACK FORM

This section details the extent to which the assessment criteria are demonstrated by you, which in turn determines your mark. The marks available for each category of skill are shown. Lecturers will use the space provided to comment on the achievement of the task(s), including those areas in which you have performed well and areas that would benefit from development/improvement.
