REFLECTION ON ENTREPREURSHIP

My entrepreneurial journey began with development of a business idea that emerged from my personal circumstances and experiences. I have been living in the United Kingdom for approximately nine years, during which time i worked continuously in warehouse environments . Although this type of employment provide financial stability , it also involved long and demanding working hours , leaving limited flexibility for family live.

A significant turning point occurred after the birth of my second child , at the moment i realized that continuing to work in the same environment would make increasingly difficult to balance professional responsibilities with my role as a parent. This situation encouraged me to reflect more deeply on alternative career paths that could provide both financial income and greater flexibility . As a result i started to consider the possibility of creating my own business, my main motivation was to develop a source of income that would allow me to manage my time more effectively while still being present and involved in my children's lives. Entrepreneurship appeared to be an attractive option because it offers the opportunity for independence creativity and personal development.

This reflection process helped me understand that starting a business is not only about financial gain , but also about creating a lifestyle that aligns with personal values and family priorities. Therefore my entrepreneurial idea was initially driven by the need to achieve a better balance between work and family responsibilities while building something meaningful for the future.

Following this initial , i began to explore different business ideas that would align with both my personal interests and practical constraints of my daily life. I was particularly drawn to creative activities , which eventually led me to discover handmade products , specifically working with resin , ceramic powder and natural soy wax. This area attracted ne because it allowed a high level of creativity , personalization and uniqueness , which are highly value in today's market. The process of starting my business Resin Craft Art LTD was both challenging and educational . At the beginning , i had limited knowledge about entrepreneurship including areas such as marketing , pricing strategies and customer behaviour. However through continuous learning experimentation and practice , i gradually developed these skills. I started by creating small products such as keychain , candles and decorative itmes , focusing on quality and attention to detail.

One of the most important lessons i learned during this process is that entrepreneurship requires resilience , patience and adaptability. There were moments of uncertainty especially in the early stage when sales were inconsistent and building customer trust was difficult . Nevertheless , i remained motivated by my long- term vision and the desired to create a sustainable business that reflects my personal values.

Overall this entrepreneurial journey has not only provided me with a potential source of income , but has also contributed significantly to my personal development, i have goal-oriented . Most importantly , i have been able to create a more flexible working environmrnt , which allows me to balance my professional ambitions with my responsibilities as a parent.
