

Rhodri Williams

1910918

(4)

the change will serve them, they can get engaged in the process making them feel more a part of the change. Honesty is also important, meaning people will need to know if the change may have a negative effect on them, that way any potential damaged relationships can be worked on. Keeping the commitments made will also show you're trustworthy, leading to better confidence amongst employees.