Component 1: Business Research Proposal

Assignment Scenario: Investigating a Complex Business Problem

Background

In this assignment, you will assume the role of a junior analyst in a company. You were tasked by your line manager, a senior analyst, to select a current business issue in the organisation where you will formulate a research topic and develop a structured research proposal detailing your research plan. This business issue can pertain to any relevant issue in the business (for example, social media marketing strategy, innovations in HRM or people management, customer retention, sustainability or CSR challenges, adoption of new technologies or AI in business, among others or a combination of any of these). The senior analyst clarified that these are only examples, and you can choose a business issue that you think is relevant and current. Your proposal can develop into a full independent project eventually, pending approval before conducting the full study.

This task should demonstrate your ability to:

1. Identify and define a real-world business or management problem which could be complex, ambiguous, or multidimensional.
2. Critically review of relevant academic and industry literature to understand the context and existing solutions.
3. Design an appropriate research methodology to investigate the issue effectively.
4. Discuss the potential practical and strategic implications of your proposed study for business decision-making.

This task is designed to develop your analytical, research, and problem-solving skills - key competencies for research related, future managerial and consultancy roles.

Key Requirements

1. Identification of a Business Problem

- Select a specific, real, or plausible issue within a business or organisational context (e.g., staff retention, digital transformation, declining market share, supply chain inefficiency, or customer experience, etc.).
- Explain why this problem is significant and how it impacts business performance or strategy.
- Provide sufficient background to demonstrate your understanding of the organisational context and its challenges.

2. Research Aim, Objectives and Questions

- Clearly state the aim of your research in one concise sentence.
- Develop specific, measurable research objectives and questions that directly address the identified problem.
- Ensure alignment between your aim, questions, and the potential outcomes of your study.

3. Critical Literature Review

- Review and critically analyse key academic and professional sources related to your topic.
- Identify gaps or inconsistencies in the existing research and explain how your study intends to address them.
- Demonstrate understanding of relevant theories, models, and frameworks that support your analysis.

4. Research Methodology and Design

- Justify your choice of research approach (qualitative, quantitative, or mixed methods).
- Describe how you plan to collect and analyse data (e.g., surveys, interviews, case studies, or secondary data).
- Discuss your sampling strategy, research ethics, and data reliability and validity considerations.

5. Business Relevance and Practical Implications

- Explain how your proposed research could help the organisation make better decisions or improve operations.
- Discuss potential recommendations, innovations, or strategies that could emerge from your findings.
- Reflect on how the project contributes to your understanding of applied business research.

Additional Notes

- Ensure your proposal is logically structured, written in clear academic language, and supported by credible academic and professional sources.
- Follow the Harvard referencing style throughout.
- The word count should be in line with the module assessment brief.

GUIDANCE FOR STUDENTS IN THE COMPLETION OF TASKS

NOTE: The guidance offered below is linked to the five generic assessment criteria overleaf.

1. Engagement with Literature Skills

Your work must be informed and supported by scholarly material that is relevant to and focused on the task(s) set; you should make use of scholarly reviews and primary sources, where appropriate (for example, refereed research articles and/or original materials appropriate to the discipline). You should provide evidence that you have accessed a wide range of sources, which may be academic, governmental and industrial; these sources may include academic journal articles, textbooks, current news articles, organisational documents, and websites. You should consider the credibility of your sources; academic journals are normally highly credible sources while websites require careful consideration/selection and should be used sparingly. Any sources you use should be current and up-to-date, mostly published within the last five years or so, though seminal/important works in the field may be older. You must provide evidence of your research/own reading throughout your work, using a suitable referencing system, including in-text citations in the main body of your work and a reference list at the end of your work.

Guidance specific to this assessment: For this assessment, ensure your work is well-supported by a diverse range of credible scholarly sources (minimum 8) relevant to the topic. Use academic journal articles, textbooks, industry reports, and current articles as appropriate, while emphasising scholarly reviews and primary sources. Include sources published within the last five years to maintain currency, except for foundational works in the field. Your research should be evident throughout, with consistent in-text citations and a comprehensive reference list to demonstrate your engagement with relevant literature.

2. Knowledge and Understanding Skills.

At level 6, you should be able to demonstrate coherent and detailed knowledge and a systematic understanding of the subject area, at least some of which is informed by the latest research and/or advanced scholarship within the discipline. You should be aware of the uncertainty, ambiguity and limits of knowledge. Your work must demonstrate the growing extent of your knowledge and systematic understanding of concepts and underlying principles associated with the subject area. Knowledge relates to the facts, information and skills you have acquired through your learning. You demonstrate your understanding by interpreting the meaning of the facts and information (knowledge). This means that you need to select and include in your work the concepts, techniques, models, theories, etc. appropriate to the task(s) set. You should be able to explain the theories, concepts, etc. meaningfully to show your understanding. Your mark/grade will also depend upon the extent to which you demonstrate your knowledge and understanding; ideally each should be complete and detailed, with comprehensive coverage.

Guidance specific to this assessment: Demonstrate a deep, systematic understanding of your subject area by drawing upon the latest research and advanced scholarship. Select and apply relevant concepts, techniques, models, and theories to the topic, ensuring you can explain and interpret these elements meaningfully. At this level, it is essential to show awareness of the complexities and boundaries of knowledge in your field. Your grade will reflect the depth, coherence, and completeness of your knowledge and understanding as shown through your selected content.

3. Cognitive and Intellectual Skills

You should be able to: critically evaluate evidence, arguments, assumptions, abstract concepts and data some of which are at the forefront of a discipline (and that may be incomplete) to devise and sustain arguments, to make judgements and/or solve problems; describe and comment upon particular aspects of current research, or equivalent advanced scholarship, in the discipline. Your work must contain evidence of logical, analytical thinking, evaluation and synthesis. For example, to examine and break information down into parts, make inferences, compile, compare and contrast information. This means not just describing what! But also justifying: Why? How? When? Who? Where? At what cost? At all times, you must provide justification for your arguments and judgements. Evidence that you have reflected upon the ideas of others within the subject area is crucial to you providing a reasoned and informed debate within your work. Furthermore, you should provide evidence that you are able to make sound judgements and convincing arguments using data and concepts. Sound, valid conclusions are necessary and must be derived from the content of your work. Where relevant, alternative solutions and recommendations may be proposed.

Guidance specific to this assessment: Show your ability to critically evaluate evidence, arguments, and concepts by providing justification for your reasoning and conclusions. Go beyond simply describing information by breaking down data, making inferences, and comparing or contrasting key points. Reflect upon the ideas of others to inform a balanced debate and use data and concepts to create convincing arguments and make sound judgments. When applicable, propose alternative solutions and recommendations to demonstrate a thorough understanding of the topic.

4. Practical Skills

At level 6, you should be able to apply the methods and techniques that you have learned to review, consolidate, extend, and apply your knowledge and understanding, and to initiate and carry out projects. You will deploy accurately established techniques of analysis and enquiry relevant to the discipline, and apply them in complex and unpredictable contexts, to devise and sustain arguments and/or to solve problems. You should be able to frame appropriate questions to achieve a solution - or identify a range of solutions. You should be able to demonstrate how the subject-related concepts and ideas relate to real world situations and/or a particular context. How do they work in practice? You will deploy models, methods, techniques, and/or theories, in that context or circumstances, to assess current situations, perhaps to formulate plans or solutions to solve problems, or to create artefacts, some of which may be innovative and creative. This is likely to involve, for instance, the use of real-world artefacts, examples and cases, the application of a model within an organisation and/or benchmarking one theory or organisation against others based on stated criteria. You should show awareness of the limitations of concepts and theories when applied in particular contexts.

Guidance specific to this assessment: For this assessment, you should design a research proposal that addresses a real-world business issue, demonstrating your skills in problem-solving and decision-making. Your proposal should identify and contextualize a specific business problem, define clear research objectives and questions, and conduct a focused literature review on relevant business theories and industry trends. Outline a feasible methodology and data collection plan, considering practical implications for business strategy or operations. Additionally, address ethical considerations such as data privacy and inclusivity. Ensure your proposal is professionally structured and coherent, aligning your methodology with the business context and supporting it with relevant sources.

5. Transferable Skills for Life and Professional Practice

Your work must provide evidence of the qualities and transferable skills necessary for graduate-level employment requiring the exercise of initiative and personal responsibility and decision-making in complex and unpredictable circumstances. This includes demonstrating: the learning ability for professional development to advance existing skills and acquire new competences of a professional nature that will enable you to assume significant responsibility within organisations; that you can initiate and complete tasks and procedures, whether individually and/or collaboratively; that you can use appropriate media to effectively communicate information, arguments and analysis in a variety of forms to specialist and non-specialist audiences; fluency of expression; clarity and effectiveness in presentation and organisation. Work should be coherent and well-structured in presentation and organisation.

Guidance specific to this assessment: For this assessment, you are expected to demonstrate key transferable skills essential for professional practice, showing initiative, personal responsibility, and decision-making in complex or unpredictable situations. Your work should reflect your readiness for graduate-level employment by showcasing your learning ability for professional growth, advancing current skills, and acquiring new competencies that support significant organisational responsibilities. Emphasise your capacity to initiate and complete tasks independently and collaboratively, using appropriate media to communicate information, arguments, and analysis effectively to both specialist and non-specialist audiences. Your presentation and organisation should be coherent, well-structured, and marked by fluency, clarity, and impact, ensuring your work meets high standards of professionalism.
