Sketches:

Silhouettes:

I decided to add the silhouettes that these sketches create to reiterate the importance of shape and clarity I want to present. When you look at the dragons you can clearly tell where its wings are and its shape, its not overly complicated to see. This is the same reason why I haven't yet incorporated clothing, I want the character to be recognizable in of itself.

Evolving your Creative Craft Character Design - Mia Harries

GRADEMARK REPORT

FINAL GRADE

71 /100

GENERAL COMMENTS

1. Engagement With Literature Skills (66%)

A bibliography has been supplied as part of the assessment in IEEE format – good work. A range of sources have been used for research in the portfolio which is important to see.

2. Knowledge & Understanding Skills

(not assessed in this assignment)

3. Cognitive & Intellectual Skills (68%)

TASK A (Mind Map): The mind map covers a wide range of topics and themes identified through keywords and supporting visuals have also been included, showing an application of research. Relationships and links have also been indicated, showing that elements of Tony Busan's approach to mindmaps has been understood and applied – good work.

4. Practical Application Skills (75%)

TASK B (Moodboards): A mixed approach seems to be presented – the first moodboard is more like a mindmap, which feels like more idea exploration. This works with keywords and visual association with your research, but try to explore some of the underlying aspects of your ideas such as colour, texture, materials, etc. Each one of the sections of the first moodboard could be explored in this way to make a very effective foundation for an art bible.

The character summary moodboard is a 'deeper dive' into specific design elements and thoughts which is good to see – this clearly illustrates your critical thinking skills and creative ideas and communicated this to an audience.

TASK C (Visual Designs): Shape theory and silhouettes have been applied to the design work, displaying an application of course content and design knowledge. Understanding of clear posing for distinct design work is also evident in the silhouettes, which is good to see – hopefully this approach has been useful in the idea generation phase and will be of benefit in future design work.

5. Transferrable Skills for Life and Professional Practice
