INTRODUCTION

- My intended career is to manage a care industry after my studies and I have very quickly come to the realisation that there are certain skills and knowledge I will need to have academically in order to play this role effectively.

MAIN BODY

- My plans from here are to become a manager for an already established care firm or the health care sector.
- Management role requires that I am able to guide, develop and maintain the goal of an organisation. As a manager my job in the work place would mean that I carry the responsibilities in the day to day plans and activities that will be taking place in the work environment. This could include anticipating a potential problem or opportunities that may come up in the work place and designing a plan to solve that.

- Skills needed for a management role would be effective time management, communication and listening, leadership, problem solving. There are some elements that will be needed in solving a communication problem at a workplace and apart from the digital aspect like the use of an email which is an informal approach there are other effective avenues that can be looked at such as face to face human communication and there must be a good balance between the two. (Connolly, J. 1999, p. No 7)
- My personal development plan would be to get the necessary education needed for this role that will open me up to the knowledge and skills that I need for management academically. Also work experience in a working environment that would give me the opportunity to understand a manager on the field that will give me a personal experience with humans in planning, problem solving, and communication that would be needed to help me gain all the skills I will need in stepping into the field of leadership in the workplace.

S.W.O.T ANALYSIS

- STRENGTHS – Leadership, Problem Solving, Motivation, Organised
- Weaknesses – Procrastination, Time Management
- Opportunities – Management, Leadership
- Threats – Meeting deadlines, Retaining information

CONCLUSION

- In conclusion I am excited of what the future holds for me from here onwards as I gain the knowledge that will give me the opportunity to step into a new space in my career doing my part to help society whilst expressing and sharing what I have learnt on this course in assisting others.
