Scott Clarke

Tuesday, 10 September 2019 21:43

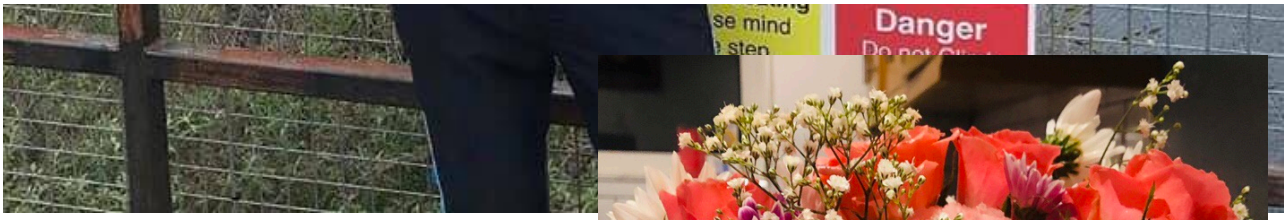

I am aiming to be a secondary school chemistry teacher as I truly love chemistry and want to make sure the next generation is more equipped than I was.

Chemistry is where everything comes alive about science. It’s a clear statement where the theory meets the practical and the visual aspect really reaches kids, inspiring them to pursue alternative ways of thinking and investigation further into a broader world of science they may have never believed themselves any good at.

I love baking ! It's so relaxing and I've been able to sell a few on the side as well to make sure I am fed through the weeks while at uni !

I'm also a qualified ocean diver, trying to find time to keep diving, move house, earn a PGCE, keep a side business afloat and maintain my mental health and relationships.

Danger

26

