Origins of the ambulance services

My name is rosemary Brennan i am currently studying a level 4 health and social care. My essay on the ambulance services is as follows it covers all areas of the ambulance services ranging from the origins of the service to the historical content that shaped its development through to also doing a paragraph how the service functions today. The origins of the ambulatory services are listed as follows according to gov.uk the ambulance services (emergency services) the role eligibility staff performing emergency duties as a core part of there role are eligible for the award.where emergency duties is defined as the requirement to provide a onsite immediate response or support delivery of onsite incident responses to calls arising unexpectedly and requiring an urgent or immediate response from the ambulance services. the following list stated by gov,uk is listed below

- 1)staff directly engaged in the provisions of frontline emergency or other face to face appointments examples of roles include paramedics, nurses, technicians emergency medical assistant and urgent care practitioners.
- 2) staff directly engaged in the provision of activities required to make emergency calls, despatch emergency and urgent care vehicles, provide clinical advice to patients.
- 3) staff directly involved in the clinical leadership and also management and emergency operations.

Below is a list that states the current main features of the ambulance services/

The four pillars of pandemic are 1) clincial practice

2) leadership

3)research and development

4)managagement education

The key trends and operational goals are as follows see and teat or hear and treat

Integrated care

Data given performance

The main features of the ambulatory services are documented below in no necessary order 1)mental health support

2)modern equipment

3)major incident preparedness

4)24/7 access to treatment

5)specialised staffing

6)regulatory compliance

7)specialised vehicles and units

8)critical care transfers

9)rapid response and emergency access

According to google scholar People who usually call emergency services are vulnerable because of health and social circumstances. Can not access necessary care that is needed which leads to unresolved problems. case management by disciplinary meetings can help reduce the demand for emergency services.
