

Cernnunos: The Horned God

Lord of Animals, Nature Deity, Guarded portal to Otherworld, Ruled active forces of Life, Death, Regeneration, Fertility

His image is found throughout Celtic lands in both Celtic and Romano-Celtic sites of Worship

His role as Animal God & Hunter is well preserved in Celtic Myth & Legend

Roman association of Underworld and Riches sees him portrayed with gold to signify wealth during Romano-Celtic times

In Celtic times was usually portrayed with a Ram-headed serpent in his left hand, sitting cross-legged. He had both animal and human ears, sporting a rack of antlers, hung with a torc. A Stag tends to be found at his right, with other woodland animals also seen.

He eventually becomes the only Deity shown wearing a Torc

His name is also impacted, as Cernunnos is a Latinised name
