Identity, Object

Objects have been collected and stored in museums, and archives across the world with many spaces focusing on the identity of cultures and countries.

The foundation of this lecture will be the individual and the connection that we have to objects with a focus on a historical material culture of Wales and the placing of objects within a Welsh home.

Hunaniaeth, Gwrthrych

Dros amser mae gwrthrychau wedi'u casglu a'u storio mewn amgueddfeydd ac archifau ledled y byd gyda llawer o fannau yn canolbwyntio ar hunaniaeth ddiwylliant a gwledydd.

Sail y ddarlith, bydd yr unigolyn a'r cysylltiad sydd gennym ar wrthrych gyda ffocws ar Gymru a diwylliant materol hanesyddol a'r gosod o wrthrychau yn y cartref Cymreig.

... cloth, pots, tools, and machines are solid objects, we can return to them again and again in time; we can linger as we cannot in the flow of a discussion... Objects do not inevitably decay from within like a human body. The histories of things follow a ... course, in which metamorphosis and adaptation play a stronger role across human generations.

Richard Sennett (2008) The Craftsman (prologue 15)

The striking form and character of Welsh dressers are unmistakeable. The dresser has lent status to kitchens, living rooms and front parlours.

Mae harddwch a chymeriad arbennig yn perthyn i'r ddresel Gymreig. Dros y canrifoedd daeth â statws a cheinder i'r gegin, yr ystafell fyw a'r parlwr gorau

“Welsh dressers and their panoply of displayed objects deserve to be recognized as a form of popular art central to any concept of Welsh visual culture and tradition.”

(Vincentelli 1994 p240)

“The female role may be largely custodial, caring for it (the dresser) on behalf of future generations”.

(Vincentelli 1994 p236)

‘The Welsh dresser appears to operate not merely as a piece of furniture for domestic storage and display but as a focus for the establishment for social meanings associated with gender, domestic well-being and national identity’
(Vincentelli 1994 P229)

Welsh dresser and cultural meaning ..particularly important in Wales because the dresser’s history and development (from the 18th Century onwards) have coincided with moments when there have been a need to affirm Welsh identity.

Cartref Nain a Taid yn Llansannan oedd Llys Euryn. Ar ôl ffermio gydol eu hoes, ymddeolodd y ddau i'r byngalo bychan newydd yn y pentref. Troesant gae anaddawol yn ardd ryfeddol a llanwyd y ty â thrugareddau eu bywyd yn lluniau'r teulu, ornaments a phetheuach ymddangosiadol ddiwerth. Ymhlyg yn y geriach hyn i gyd yr oedd holl straeon eu bywyd. Lluniau o straeon y bywyd hwnnw, wedi ei weld ar ôl iddynt fynd ar daith olaf i gartref henoed, yw'r casgliad hwn felly.

Llys Euryn was my grandparents' house in Llansannan, north Wales. After a life spent as farmers they retired to this brand new bungalow in the village. Here they created an extraordinary garden from an unpromising field, and filled the house with the furnishings of their old life family photos, ornaments and beautifully kitsch bits and pieces. All were imbued with the story of their lives. Here, therefore, are photographs of that life story, told after they left for the last time, to an old people's home.

For centuries wool was a staple of the Montgomeryshire economy. The main product of the mills of Newtown, Llanidloes and other towns was cheap flannel, a soft cloth woven from carded wool.

When Laura Ashley brought her small textile business to Machynlleth in 1961 she may have been in search of cheaper labour rather than a revival of the county's textile industry, but her move did lead to a small renaissance.

The house in Machynlleth soon proved too small, and in 1966 the Ashleys bought new accommodation in Carno, a small village 18 miles to the east.

Here they soon took over the disused railway station building and turned it into a factory making cotton tea towels, smocks, dresses, blouses and other items.

They employed over a hundred people. According to one worker, 'they breathed life back into the village', which had long suffered from a lack of jobs.

Stained Glass Window

Sunday, September 15, 1963, a bomb exploded at the 16th Street Baptist Church in Birmingham, Alabama, killing four young girls and injuring more than 20 members of the congregation.

This special memorial gift—a large stained glass window of the image of a black crucified Christ—was given by the people of Wales, designed by John Petts.

In January 1935 two United States companies found a way of making a can that could withstand high pressure and avoid contaminating the beer's flavour.

Felinfoel, working with tinsplate from the St David's works and the Metal Box Company, soon followed. Its first cans appeared on 3 December 1935.

A local newspaper headline announced, 'Canned beer arrives: epoch-making process at Felinfoel Brewery. New hope for tinsplate industry'.

At first, sales of Felinfoel cans were modest.

During the Second World War production increased, as cardboard boxes, each containing a dozen cans, were sent, post-free, to British troops abroad, especially in the Middle and Far East.

Today canned beer is still brewed in Felinfoel, in the original building, by the same family firm.

In 1847 the government published a report, of 1,252 closely printed pages, entitled Reports of the Commissioners of Inquiry into the state of education in Wales.

- The suppression of the language extended to education too. In parliamentary reports known as The Blue Books it says: 'The Welsh language is a vast drawback to Wales, and a manifold barrier to the moral progress and commercial prosperity of the people. It is not easy to over-estimate its evil effects... It dissevers the people from intercourse which would greatly advance their civilisation, and bars the access of improving knowledge to their minds. As a proof of this, there is no Welsh literature worthy of the name.'
- The reaction in Wales was furious.

One of the inevitable results of the report was its effect on the nation's mind and psyche. It was at this time that ordinary Welsh people began to believe that they could only improve themselves socially through education and the ability to speak and communicate in English.

Un o ganlyniadau anorfod yr adroddiad oedd yr effaith a gafodd ar psyche ac ar feddylfryd y genedl. Dyma'r pryd y dechreuodd y Cymro cyffredin goleddu'r syniad mai drwy addysg a gwybodaeth a'r gallu i siarad a chyfathrebu yn Saesneg y gallai ddringo'n gymdeithasol

Welsh is now used alongside English in all spheres of life, and has equal status legally. Can we reach a million speakers by 2050? Why stop there? Welsh and English have coexisted in Wales for centuries now – and perhaps our long experience of bilingualism is something we can profitably share with the world as we reclaim our heritage.

‘STORYTELLING IN DESIGN Throughout our description of the design process, we’ve emphasized the role of stories and storytelling. We’ve suggested that the first half of the design process entails figuring out the story as it exists for users in the present, which in turn informs those participating in the design process. The second half of the process involves telling a new story, a story that inspires the design team on behalf of the customer. This shift (Figure 2) is at the heart of the design process—first framing the situation as it is, and then reframing it to make things better...two types of stories – those that inform and those that inspire.’

Derrida argues that Freud's theory of the unconscious fundamentally alters (or at least should fundamentally alter) any attempt, from within any discipline, to think about the past. And importantly, not only in our ways of thinking about the past but also about how we think of the future. Derrida makes a critical point about the importance of archives when he observes that archives are a way of imagining the future.

Yy Zz

- Though rooted in the Latin alphabet, the written Welsh language omits certain Roman stalwarts (j, k, q, v, x, z) and comprises 28 total characters with the inclusion of eight digraphs, or letter-combinations.

- These digraphs — ultimately treated as true ligatures in the instances of Ch, ch, dd, Ff, ff, Ll, Th, th — would come to set the tone for the proposal put forth: a series of three typefaces, each with Standard and Headline variants, the latter of which would put the provenance of the Welsh language front and center.

Looking to the history of the land itself, we took cues from Celtic and Gaelic typographies to inform several of the consonants (d, h, l, m, n, u), taking special care not to wander into the territory of pastiche or parody. These forms comprised the infrastructure for the more expressive, headline cut of the type family (Cymru — Welsh for ‘Wales’), while Wales Sans acted as the more staid (and, indeed, English-language) counterpart.

Y ddraig Goch

- In 1901 the dragon became the official symbol of Wales, and in Caernarfon in 1911, at the investiture of Edward, Prince of Wales, the flag appeared in its current form, helping its rise to prominence.
 - In 1953 it was announced that there would be a new royal badge containing the motto "Y Ddraig Goch Ddyry Cychwyn" (an approximate translation is "the red dragon inspires action").
 - In 1959, after successful lobbying by the Gorsedd of Bards and others, Queen Elizabeth II made the red dragon on a green and white background the official flag for Wales.
- Ym 1901 daeth y ddraig yn symbol swyddogol Cymru, ac yng Nghaernarfon yn 1911, ar arwisgiad Edward, Tywysog Cymru, ymddangosodd y faner yn ei ffurf bresennol, helpodd hyn ei chodiad i amlygrwydd.

IORWERTH PEATE (1901-1982), Curator of the Welsh Folk Museum, 1948-1971, scholar and poet.

- Peate published his pioneering volume, The Welsh House inspired by Ake Campbell's work on Irish houses, in 1940.
- in 1948 he was appointed Keeper-in-Charge (later Curator) of the new Folk Museum created in the grounds of St Fagans Castle.
- He devoted his attention to the selection of suitable buildings for re-erection at St Fagans. He paid special attention to the collection and recording of craft terminologies and dialects by his staff and publicised the new institution by lecturing extensively throughout Wales and contributing numerous articles to the press.
- He published his ideas on the new institution in a popular bilingual volume Amgueddfeydd Gwerin / Folk Museums (1948).
- Through the financial support of local authorities, charitable trusts and a public appeal he saw the realisation of a dream that he had when he first heard of the pioneering open-air museums of Scandinavia from his Norwegian friend Alf Sommerfelt who had been studying the spoken Welsh of Iorwerth Peate's native Cyfeiliog in the 1920s.

IORWERTH PEATE (1901-1982), Curadur Amgueddfa Werin Cymru, 1948-1971, ysgolhaig, llenor a bardd;

- Yr oedd wedi cyhoeddi ei waith arloesol The Welsh House; a Study in Folk Culture (1940) a gafodd ei ysbrydoli gan waith Åke Campbell ar dai Iwerddon.
- 1948 penodwyd yn Geidwad-a-gofal ac yn ddiweddarach yn Guradur yr Amgueddfa Werin newydd a sefydlwyd ar dir Castell Sain Ffagan.

- Cyhoeddodd ei syniadau am y sefydliad newydd mewn cyfrol ddwyieithog boblogaidd iawn yn 1948, sef Amgueddfeydd Gwerin / Folk Museums. Drwy gymorth ariannol y Cynghorau Sir a chronfeydd cyhoeddus cafodd weld gwireddu breuddwyd a fu ganddo ers iddo glywed am amgueddfeydd awyr-agored arloesol Llychlyn gan ei gyfaill o Norwy, Alf Sommerfelt, a fu'n gweithio ar dafodiaith Cyfeiliogyn y 1920au; ond ni chafodd weld Sain Ffagan yn datblygu'n sefydliad annibynnol fel yr oedd wedi gobeithio.

Alexander McQueen's autumn winter collection 2020

- Elen Phillips, principal curator of contemporary and community history at NMW, told Museums Journal that the collaboration had been an “unbelievable experience”.
- She said: “The design team from McQueen made several research visits to St Fagans in late 2019/early 2020. They wanted to 'get to know Wales' through our collections and historic buildings, and were particularly interested in the personal biographies of the craft objects they saw - from patchwork and quilted pieces to carved lovespoons and woven blankets.
