Own reflection

During my work life I've achieved many skills such as solving difficult problems, have an effective communication with other people like customers, colleagues etc. Have a good sense of business operation, time keeping and leadership. I've learnt that I achieved these skills thanks to my manager, that gave me feedback on my work performance through the staff meeting that we had and after many mistakes. I manage to achieve the mentioned skills through my hard work and being focused everyday through my shifts. It is important for me because it gives an idea on what I must improve on to progress towards my intended career, as well as knowing what targets I have achieved so far. I can build further on this by taking note of all the constructive criticism and implementing it in my work experience every day until I don't reach whatever targets I have set for myself.
