

My skills for employability to be a Healthcare assistant

Basilia Chinyere Chinaka
2027595

Task 1: Academic and
Employability Skills BMSW4001
Lecturer: Joy Botu

Strength 1: Communication

Communication is one of the skills I am good at because being a healthcare assistant includes talking and communicating with patients and co-workers.

- Examples of communication include:
 - Writing reports about patients to management.
 - Allocating jobs for each member on a team to do.
 - Talking to patients and knowing if they are comfortable or need assistance

Strength 2: Teamwork

This is also a strength of mine as I can work together with others to achieve the best outcome- teamwork for me is being able to get along with other people at work.

- When you work and have a good relationship with your colleague everything will be able to move smoothly.
- Being a healthcare assistant, you can work with many different people and making sure we help each other and work hard at the same time can help achieve our goal.

Strength 3: Problem Solving

This is finding a solution to anything that may occur at the workplace and dealing with it the right way.

- Using time wisely will help you avoid problems from happening in the first place, or if it does happen, we can avoid it happening again.
- Also using quick thinking and problem solving in times of emergencies can help any bad situations.

Weakness 1: Technology

Although technology is becoming a very big thing currently, it is one of the skills I could use more experience in.

- Technology is now a more important aspect to this career- may it be recording patients' wellbeing or providing quicker solutions to disease in healthcare.
- Learning more about this skill can help me advance whilst learning and working in the healthcare industry.

Weakness 2: Saying 'no'

Helping others is one thing I'm great at, but sometimes it becomes too much, and I end up accepting task that I'm unable to do.

- Communication is one of my strengths, but this category is more difficult.
- In helping others, sometimes it can get in the way of my own work/learning.