...Then the Captain steers the ship towards the harbour (while) A sailor asks the captain where are they ^{one} for the sailors don't know where they are clearly. for it is night bus The captain is saying that they sail to the harbour

THS the ship in a rhapsode? The rhapsode always quote Homer. Dikaiopolis jokes towards to the rhapsodes like Socrates towards his students to

NAY. where are we? Captain. Do you know? For I clearly don't. For I see nothing because of the night (dark), and I don't know ^{is dark} where we are.

KTB. I clearly know. For we are sailing towards the harbour, sailor.

PAY. we are sailing over wine faced sea.

NAY. what is the fellow saying?

ΔJK It is clear that the fellow is quoting Homer. Therefore it is a rhapsode.

PAY He is telling truth, my dear chap. Sailing in a black ship

ΔJK what are you saying, rhapsode. what's this about a black ship? For our ship is not black. It is clear that you are stupid, and you know nothing. But are joking with us.

PAF. Be quiet! we are sailing in a swift ship, in a hollow ship.

(listen)

ΔIK. What do you hear, sailors? Come over here and listen. It is clear that the rhapsode is stupid. For the fellows know nothing closely, But he is joining with us.
