Introduction

I have picked Mike Shinoda from the band Linkin Park, and Dr Dre from ... Dr Dre both artists have been on the scene for a long long time, both grew up in the same area (globally speaking) that had similar influences. I want to find out which has more noteworthy achievements, and which will be remembered the longest.

First, what is a producer?

It used to be that a producer was simply a musical artist or perhaps a sound engineer that along their journey of music acquired lots of knowledge areas that would enable the creation of better sounding music.

No producers take a more active role in all aspects of music creation and production. they help to organise who is working on the album and how well they will mesh with everyone else. the juice is required more control over the recording process and often involved with how the song is performed and the composition behind it. While sound engineers were more involved with the equipment set up, The acoustics of the environment In front of the house, it wasn't long before the producers what also gaining intimate knowledge on all the equipment to understand the limitations of their equipment and help produce the sound they're trying to create. Although the title is a little blurrier than it used to be, the producer is a vital role in any modern music production. Producers were also in charge of creating entertainment, such as live events and festivals, and all the workforce management that comes with that.

Many producers work on a freelance basis, but others run more commercially. Some even get involved with other sectors of the entertainment industry such as Theatre. Most music producers are in an hour by hour basis. The consensus is depending on your level of notoriety and skill it can be charging from around £25 to £55 an hour. Experienced musical producers can charge far greater amounts sometimes even four times the normal price. Starting in this field you can expect an average salary of between £18,000 and £25,000, But your incomes will entirely depend on if you're employed or if you are freelance and if you are creating your music or just purely working for other artists.

Music production is not really a job you can put down you'll be working many hours a week including hours not usually in the social work time. This usually means working on a project for an extended period and then perhaps a short or long pause between projects.

Mike Shinoda

Michael Kenji Shinoda was born in Agoura Hills, LA, in 1977. For all Mike Shinoda's childhood, music is a key theme, from learning classical piano to picking up the guitar. He then went on to meet his fellow band members of Linkin Park throughout his years in junior high and college. His influences at the time were the N.W.A., Boogie Down Productions, Creedence Clearwater Revival, Led Zeppelin, Aphex Twin, Deftones, and Nine Inch Nails. Initially under the name Xero, then shifting to Fort Minor, then Hybrid Theory (later becoming the name of their first studio album after some licensing issues) and finally settling on Linkin Park.

Off with the release of their diamond-selling debut album Hybrid Theory and signing with Warner Bros., Shinoda managed to have a key role in the design of Linkin Park's album covers from then on while being involved with the group's mixing and production. He later went on to produce an entire album of remixed tracks called Reanimation, featuring Jay-Z and Skylar Grey. Linkin Park has been active from 2000 till 2020, and although the band's current situation is a little bit foggy due to the loss of the frontman and lead singer Chester Bennington, they have talked about continuing the band at some point in the future. Throughout the years, Linkin Park has released 7 albums which almost all went multiplatinum (as well as many underground albums and singles).

He was also involved in the sound production for high budget films, TV shows and video games. Some of the titles in this list include Game of Thrones, Westworld and Medal of Honour. He also produced the music for the movie created by fellow band member DJ Hahn, on the movie Mall (2014). Mike Shinoda has worked with both Steve Aoki and Sir Paul McCartney. Throughout the year's Mike Shinoda sound still evolved from an edgy rock tone to a more mellow down to earth rock tone, to a post-apocalyptic tone, in more recent years to a much more modern EDM tone. There appears to be no limit to the Arsenal of genres Mike Shinoda was able to produce for. Linkin Park has done a ridiculous amount of charity work over the years, raising money to help Hurricane Charley and Hurricane Katrina.

They raised money for the 2004 tsunami by staging several charity events and set up an additional fund called Music for Relief. They also participated at Live 8 with Jay-Z. The full list of charities Linkin Park have worked with (and created) is far too vast for me to include in this small essay but now the full list can be found on looktothestars.org. Linkin Park's Global Humanitarian Assistant Fund Music for Relief raised more than $11,000,000 to assist survivors of more than 30 natural disasters, the total amount of money they must have donated to charity is mind-boggling.

Andre Young Was born on the 18th of February in 1965. during the early 80s, he improved his craft by performing at house parties in clubs with this group the World Class Wreckin' Cru Also in LA.

Driven on to boot to create a label with Eazy-E, MC Ren, and DJ Yella. They released their first studio album in 1987. the following year they released the notorious album Straight Outta Compton. This album was an instant hit but only in the underground scene there's no one on the radio would play anything from it. with an incredibly harsh tone. when your album contains songs such as "Fuck Tha Police" you're not gonna be getting any afternoon plays to mainstream audiences.

In 1989 cube left the group, and with him went most of that political incorrectness, whether this helped or hindered the group it's up for debate. the group gained peak popularity in 1991 bondre was unhappy with the group and made efforts to leave it, Eventually getting to leave the group because (allegedly) Suge Knight Helder their manager at gunpoint and threatened to kill him if it doesn't release drays contract.

Dre then started to release his solo music featuring many familiar faces in the industry such as his stepbrother Warren G and Snoop doggy Dogg, As well as Blackstreet and Ice Cube. All in all Dr Dre has a very impressive history and list of rewards, with several Grammys and thousands of nominations along with MTV awards and tonnes of other awards. Needless to say, he is a very accomplished artist, was a little bit of a rocky history. Dr Dre is most well-known for his works with gangster rap, but also did plenty of work in hip hop and G-funk.

Eventually, Dre decided to shift from his work to the production of other artists. He then pursued work with other artists such as 50 Cent and Eminem. he also launched his own headphone company beats partnered with Jimmy Lovine. the beats headphones were very successful. With N.W.A.'s cultural resurgence and mainstream recognition of their legacy in the history of rap and hip-hop, the group received another honour for their contribution to music with their induction into the Rock 'N Roll Hall of Fame in 2016. In 2014 talk to Dre and Jimmy lovine donated a total of $70,000,000 endowment to the University of Southern California to create EU SC Jimmy lovine and Andre young academy for arts, technology and business of innovation.

Dr Dre is also supported other charities such as global fund and Michael Jay Fox foundation.

Conclusion

With Dr Dre is music coming out a lot earlier and directly influencing Mike Shinoda it might surprise some to hear that the music they play is vastly different. aside from perhaps my shoulders very early work in Fort Minor and other projects Linkin Park sound, in general, is absolutely nothing like anything Dr Dre ever submitted to the world. this is again a little surprising what we've done both coming from LA and seemingly coming up on the same scene. but Linkin Park what incredibly commercially successful in the public limelight, with massive hit singles from every album they've ever produced and the radio always running the place in Linkin Park. so it's not all that surprising that the followings and the sound would be so vastly different.

Summary

On the question of which of these two amazing artists will be remembered for a greater time, I'm not sure there is any way to concretely answer the question. on one hand, Dr Dre has had such a huge impact culturally and commercially on the world it is hard to understate just how big of a revolution Uncured thanks to his music.

On the other hand, Linkin Park has been top charters top sellers with a huge following and fanbase and have been more active during the era of the Internet, Having completely revolutionised the music scene within the rock community. at the end of the day, they are both Giants in their respect, and perhaps both should be respected in their own separate way as such.
