

Basic Digital Safety

Yehor Kulikov
Student ID:2417098

Staying safe online is very important. Use this basic digital safety tips to protect yourself from being hacked or scammed

Use 2-step authorization

It helps protect your online accounts from hacking

Protect all emails and other accounts by using strong password

Criminals can use your email to have access to other accounts and private information Use upper letters, special characters to make it stronger and harder to brake.

Download updates

Software and App updates is vital security updates to help protect your device from hacking

Use random words

Using few random words in your password makes more difficult for criminals to brute force it

Save copies of your important data

Make a copy of your documents, and memories by backing them on external storage or Cloud

Use antivirus

It can protect your computer being hacked. It scanning your device and delete unwanted programs

Annual number of malware attacks worldwide from 2015 to 2023 (in billions)

Source
SonicWall
© Statista 2024

Additional Information:
Worldwide; SonicWall; 2015 to 2023; data is based on SonicWall Capture
Labs characteristics; wider industry metrics may vary

It is very important to prevent being hacked because nowadays more and more online technologies and services get in our lives. People today critically attached to online services and devises so it is very valuable for information thieves

The worldwide number of malware attacks reached 6.06 billion In 2023, it is 10%more than previous year but lower then was detected in 2018, when 10.5 billion reports about malware attacks was sanded around the world.

Petrosyan, A.(2024)

References:

Petrosyan, A. (2024) Annual number of malware attacks worldwide from 2015 to 2023. Available at: <https://www.statista.com/statistics/873097/malware-attacks-per-year-worldwide/> (Accessed 28 November 2024).